Deadlock Broken, Coal Strike Ends

MINERS TO BE BACK IN PITS IN 24 HOURS

Southern Operators Agree To President's Plan After Parley With Jones.

HEARD STERN WARNING

Defense Officers Are Jubilant as Settlement Assures Supplies of Fuel.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The United Mine Workers announced today that production will be resumed in the soft coal mines Thursday morning.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Resumption of soft coal production within 24 hours was forecast today after southern operators accepted President Roosevelt's plan for breaking the soft coal wage impasse and unexpectedly tossed in a $1-a-day pay boost pending a final contract settlement.

The end of the month-old deadlock was buoyant news to worried defense officials, for it promised speedy replenishment of the dwindling fuel supplies which threatened to cause major curtailment of arms production in vital defense plants.

The soft coal mines in the eight-state Appalachian area and outlying districts which produce approximately 11,000,000 tons a week, were expected to go back into production as soon as John L. Lewis' United Mines Workers union and the northern and southern producers can complete the details for getting miners back into the pits.

The break in the coal wage controversy which has kept the mines shut since April 1 came late last night when Presidential Secretary Stephen Early announced that the southern operators had accepted a proposal by the president to reopen the southern mines and negotiate a wage agreement with the

Ravenna to Load Its First Shell Within 2 Months

RAVENNA—(U.P.)—Lieut. Col. R. S. Chavin, commanding officer at the Ravenna Ordnance plant, predicted today that the first shell will be loaded at the $20,000,000 arsenal early in July.

Col. Chavin said the completion of numerous construction projects soon will result in a steady decrease in the peak employment population of 16,000.

"The first group of more than 1,000 buildings has been completed and nearly all the railroad and drainage work is finished. From now until January, 1942, when the plant is scheduled for completion, there will be gradual reductions in our employes because of the cessation of building," he said.

Officials revealed that approximately 1,000 workers were dismissed last week.

Stalin Won't Help Allies, Speaker Says

Editor Tells 600 Here Red Moves Made to Confuse War Picture.

Interpreting the neutrality pact signed recently by Russia and Japan as a boon to Hitler, Eugene Lyons, widely known author and lecturer and authority on Russia, predicted in a talk last night in Mansfield that the Allies can expect no help from Stalin in their battle against the surge of the totalitarian powers

The belief that Stalin may turn on Hitler or join the democracies against him is only an illusion, part of the totalitarian plan to confuse the rest of the world, Lyons said.

Editor of the American Mercury and former newspaper correspondent in Moscow, Lyons spoke in Senior high school auditorium under the sponsorship of the Mansfield Rotary and University clubs About 600 persons heard him.

Stalin is a silent partner to Hitler, helping him spread damaging propaganda throughout the democratic world and acting as his purchasing agent, even buying oil drilling machinery and fats and oils, things Hitler needs, from the United States, Lyons asserted.

"It is a distinct advantage to Hitler to have Russia neutral, and Hitler needed that Russo-Japanese neutrality pact to permit Japan to act against Great Britain and the United States in the Pacific," he continued.

"Russia and Germany may even collaborate in holding down Turkey, and Hitler may give Russia the go signal into Persia and India if he succeeds in defeating Britain in the Dardanelles and the Suez."

Stalin has given Hitler help where he needed it most; first, by going into Finland to half-encircle the Scandinavian countries on the east, and then by offering no resistance when Hitler invaded Poland and the Balkan region, Lyons said.

As a gesture, Russia seemingly encouraged Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, but always Stalin intentionally offered help a day or so too late, he added.

LETS LINDY GO

War Secretary Accepts His Air Corps Resignation.

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Secretary of War Stimson today accepted the resignation of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as a colonel in the army air corps reserve.

The decision came on the heels of speculation by presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early on the possibility that the famed "lone eagle" might also return to Adolf Hitler a decoration he received from the Nazi government shortly before the war.

A war department spokesman made the announcement that Lindbergh's letter of resignation had been received by Stimson. The spokesman merely told reporters the resignation had been accepted.

ASK SAME PAY RATE FOR WOMEN

Timken Union Seeks Further Concessions From Company.

CANTON —(AP)— After obtaining 10-cent hourly wage increases for 14,000 employes of the Timken Roller Bearing company, the Steel Workers Organizing committee (CIO) today pressed negotiations with the company to place women employes on the same wage level as men workers.

The hourly wage advances which will total $2,500,000 annually for the company's plants at Canton, Columbus and Mount Vernon were announced yesterday by President William R. Umstaddt. The raises, retroactive to April 1, bring the men's minimum to 72½ cents per hour and the women's to 60 cents.

RICHMOND, Ind. — (AP) — To foil cracksmen, Herb Meier and Art Bode hung a sign reading, "nothing inside," on the safe in their filling station and listed the combination. Somebody broke into the place, took 24 cartons of cigarets, opened the safe and stole a $35 gold watch, which had been left there by mistake.

OK'S WATER FOR EMPIRE PLANT

Council Agrees To License Company at $100 a Year For Longview Station.

City council last night agreed to license the city's Longview avenue water well and pumping station to the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company, opening the way for the plant to obtain additional water facilities for expanding industrial needs.

Council agreed on a fee of $100 a year. The well has not been used since the state department of health recommended its abandonment for purposes of sanitation.

Approval of the license was granted after council, meeting in a caucus, waived its right for previous notice of an official meeting and endorsed a "gentleman's agreement" to be later embodied in an ordinance.

Under the terms of the agreement, the city will allow the company to use the station and water from the station. The company will build a 1,000 foot water line from the station to its own lines, install a motor and pump, and maintain the station. All expense in the project, expected to be about $5,000, is to be borne by the company.

Council also included clauses which provided that the company will turn over the station's facilities to the city immediately upon request in case of an emergency. The city also retained the right to revoke the license in case of any emergency. Decision as to

STEUBENVILLE IN GAY WHIRL

Residents In Dither as Part of City Accepts Daylight Time.

STEUBENVILLE —(AP)— Steubenville's 37,586 residents are in a squirrely-whirl over the time today.

Most of the merchants have adopted daylight saving time. The residential section is sticking to eastern standard figures.

The factories have moved clocks ahead an hour, but schools, theaters and small business houses have refused to tinker with their time-pieces.

City officials are expected to untangle the mess with legislation.

Downs Caught In Midst Of 'Battle of Atlantic'

Noted Correspondent, Heading For Near East, Finds War at Sea Grim, Vast and Full of Bravery.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Thrown into the battle of the Atlantic by a fire aboard a ship on which he was traveling in convoy to the near East, Kenneth Downs, International News Service correspondent who recently completed a series of articles on conditions in France, herewith writes the first of a series of three articles on the story of the war at sea.

By KENNETH DOWNS
(INS Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Delayed by Censor—I am now able to tell how escape from a flaming ship far out in the Atlantic afforded this correspondent the rare opportunity of glimpsing one of the greatest battles of all time—the Battle of the Atlantic.

We were rescued by one of the famous fifty ex-American destroyers and then for six days held a ringside seat to the great ocean struggle.

During this time we attacked and possibly sank an enemy submarine, took up battle positions for a battle which didn't materialize, then joined and brought into a British port a large convoy.

Because the navy—traditionally the "silent service"—seldom lets the world know of its activities beyond the grim box scores it periodically issues of tonnage won or lost, the battle of the Atlantic is as mysterious as it is important.

It is as mysterious as the vast grey battlefield upon which it is fought.

I found I had absolutely no conception of its enormity, nor of the tremendous effort that is going into it, nor of its cost, nor of the vigilance endurance, skill and supreme bravery of the men who are fighting it.

The unhappy chance which gave me six days with the navy occurred recently. We were then three days out from England

RUMOR SPIKED

Army Chief Declares Draft Ages Not To Be Changed.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Straight from Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, a house appropriations subcommittee learned that the war department has no present intention of asking congress to change the 21-35 draft ages, or extend the one-year training period for selectees.

Chairman Snyder (D., Pa.) of the war department appropriations subcommittee today disclosed this testimony which he said Marshall had given in a brief discussion of the operation of the selective service law.

Snyder quoted Marshall as testifying specifically that the department has no plans to ask congress to order an extension of the one-year training period for any person subjected to a year's training under existing law.

FUND WORKERS GET THIRD OF $64,375 GOAL

Total of $24,097 Reported as Annual Campaign Starts In Big Way.

AHEAD OF OTHER YEARS

Early Report To Be Followed Up By Final Figures For Day and a Half's Work.

Reporting $24,097.50 already raised toward the 1941 goal of $64,375 Community Fund workers prepared to give final reports of the first day and a half of solicitation at the Evergreens cafeteria at noon today.

With more than one-third of the goal pledged to date, Fund solicitors have exceeded the amount usually subscribed the first day in other years by about $8,000.

Leading the campaign in the amount of collected funds and pledges was the industrial division, headed by A. C. Rhodes, chairman, with $17,965.

JAC solicitors working with James Hoffman, major of the food division, gave a full day's time to solicitation Monday, through the co-operation of their employers. Their pledges totalled $1,275.

Other division majors submitted the following reports to Jane Williams, executive secretary.

Mrs. Frank Maxwell, organizations, $1,926; O. C. McCormick, construction, $409; C. N. Shultz, professional, $800; Edwin Geiger, automobile, $305; George H. Smith, financial, $1,124; Kent Oberlin, public service $426.50; Bart Haley, clothing, $200.

Approximately 300 workers are engaged in solicitation and are scheduled to make reports twice daily, at the noon luncheons and to executive office prior to that time.

Eleven agencies will benefit from the Fund this year.

Mansfielders will be kept posted on progress of the campaign by "score boards" that have been erected in Central park and at six different places in residential districts.

Workers will hold daily report sessions for the remainder of the drive.

President's Son Undergoes Air Raid on Chungking Arrival.

CHUNKING — (INS) — Three hours after his arrival, Capt. James Roosevelt, President Roosevelt's eldest son, underwent a Japanese air raid in this capital of the Chinese government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

Capt. Roosevelt, an observer for the U. S. marines, huddled in one of the inky black dugouts which the Chinese of Chungking have hewed out of the solid rock of the hills of the city, for an hour and a half.

Reports that Capt. Roosevelt will remain in China only two or three weeks were confirmed by Chinese diplomatic circles.

Speed Boats In Clash, Germans' Big Guns Blaze

Heaviest Cross-Channel Bombardment Of War Reported; Nazis Gird For Attack on Crete, Full Dress Rehearsal For Invasion.

BULLETIN

BERLIN — (AP) — Germany, Italy, Hungary and Bulgaria are to share vanquished Yugoslavia's territory, according to a "clue" to the dismemberment given today by the highly-placed commentary, Dienst Aus Deutschland.

BULLETIN

BERLIN — (AP) — Informed sources said tonight that German troops were "approaching the last harbors in extreme southern and southwestern Greece." These harbors were described as the only ones available for removing the remainder of the British and Greek forces still fighting in Greece.

(By Associated Press)

A battle between British and German speedboats, attacking along the southeast "invasion" coast of England, was reported today as Nazi long-range guns on the French coast unleashed the heaviest cross-channel bombardment of the war.

The twin actions may have been "feeler" stabs of the type likely to become general in an invasion attempt.

DNB, the official German news agency, declared several British speedboats were damaged in the clash.

Apparently however, Hitler's long-awaited storming of the British Isles was not in the immediate offing. It was pointed out in London yesterday that the RAF had not concentrated recently in bombing German-held ports across the channel. This would indicate that the RAF had not found any new massing of German troop barges.

In the Balkans, Hitler's war machine—undefeated on land—was reported girding for an assault on the Island of Crete, 75 miles south of the Greek mainland, in what might be a full-dress rehearsal for an attempt to invade England.

The island — legendary birthplace of Zeus, ancient Greek god of thunder and ruler of the skies—is the new governmental seat of King George II, who fled Athens last Wednesday.

It also serves as a British base, and presumably part of the British expeditionary force has landed there in its flight from the Grecian Peloponnesus.

DNB, the official German news agency, asserted that five British ships totalling 18,500 tons were sunk by Nazi dive-bombers yesterday in passage between the Greek mainland and Crete.

On the western front, a violent cross-channel duel raged throughout this forenoon as German long-range guns hurled shells for six hours into the Dover area—possible invasion gateway—while British gunners returned the fire.

RAF bombers dashed across the channel at the height of the shelling, and heavy explosions along the French coast from Boulogne to Cap Gris Nez indicated they were pounding the Nazi gun emplacements.

At its narrowest point, from Dover to Calais, the strait is 21 miles wide.

In North Africa, Premier Mussolini's high command reported, German and Italian scouting troops inflicted heavy losses on the British in fighting around Salum, just inside the Egyptian frontier from Libya.

London reports countered with the assertion that the Axis vanguard, driving toward the Suez canal, had been held in check by the harassing action of British patrols five or six miles east of Salum.

Australian troops at the siege-girt Libyan port of Tobruk were said to have made new sallies against Axis forces in that sector,

REACTION: Japan Views U. S. As Plunging Into War

(By Associated Press)

TOKYO—The newspaper Kokumin declared today the United States decision for extended patrol of Atlantic waters of the western hemisphere "means the United States is but a step from entering the war"

"The United States navy is taking care of this route to England, which should be the work of the British navy," Kokumin said. "No one can deny this.

"This also means conflict will begin between the United States and Germany."

The Times Advertiser, controled by the Japanese foreign office, carried a headline "war worry causes general price drop" over a story which said "concern is felt on the market that the United States at last is bracing up to take a catastrophic plunge into the European war, and this caused a wholesale fall in stocks."

The Times Advertiser said in an editorial that the possibility of peace terms rests upon the United States and added:

"Hence, the United States holds the power of decision, and a grave responsibility rests upon President Roosevelt's shoulders in this critical hour."

The editorial was based upon the idea "the British people cannot fight on alone."

The usually temperate newspaper Asahi described the United States as "going headlong into war"

Since Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka's return from Rome,

DEBATE: Churchill Puts War Policy Up To Commons

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Prime Minister Churchill turned down flatly today a suggestion that he form a streamlined supreme war cabinet and announced that full dress war debate would be held in the house of commons next week.

The house greeted with loud cheers Churchill's announcement that it would be offered the following motion for debate:

"That this house approves the policy of the government in sending help to Greece and declares its confidence that our operations in the middle east and all other theaters of war will be pursued by the government with utmost vigor"

Churchill said that if the house wished the debate could be extended over two days, explaining that the government had arranged debate on the first sitting day after this week.

He indicated that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, whose trip to the Balkans and the middle east preceded the Greek campaign, would "take an important part" in the discussion.

Eden is expected to report on his diplomatic efforts in the middle east to build up a front against the Axis

Most Courthouse Visitors Walk Because County Hasn't Hired Elevator Operator

Built to Help Aged Folk, Lift at Present Really Defeats Purpose.

A new $15,000 elevator went into operation at the Richland county courthouse a month ago, but about half the patrons of county offices, including elderly people, still climb the winding stairway because they don't know how to operate the elevator and there is no operator to help them.

Although county commissioners have nearly 50 applications for the operator's job in file, they have no immediate intentions of employing an operator, C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the board, said today.

"Usually there are people around the elevator entrances to help anyone who wants to use the elevator, and unless it becomes apparent that an operator is needed, we won't hire one," Mitchell asserted.

Other county officials pointed out that the absence of an operator partly defeats the purpose of the elevator which was installed to save steps for old people who complained about climbing the stairs.

County workers and regular visitors to the courthouse use the elevator because they know how to operate it. Others who are unfamiliar with it, are afraid to try it alone.

The elevator operates automatically with the push of a button, and there is little chance of anyone being injured in it, but the control panel is confusing to persons not familiar with it.

Mitchell said the commissioners would post instructions at the elevator entrances for the benefit of strangers in the building.

If that plan doesn't work, commissioners may consider hiring a regular operator, he said.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

"It could just as easily have been a burglar," says Mrs. Christian Herrick.

"I woke up Sunday morning about 5 o'clock and there was somebody standing by my bed demanding: 'What's the matter, here?'

"It was Chris. He'd tried to wake us up, and then had climbed through a window.

"And I didn't expect him home from that A. B. C. bowling tournament at St. Paul until Sunday night."

That's only half of the story. The best half is the big and satisfied grin Chris puts on as Mrs. Chris tells the story.

But a picture I'd like to have is that of Liederkranz Kegler Chris, home from the A. B. C. wars, climbing through a window at that hour of the morning. Now if I can get a photographer out at that hour—

Chris would have had us all in stitches
If that window had banged upon his britches.

"I'm too old to be that good any more," says Bill Donnellan regarding the 692 he rolled in doubles at St. Paul.

"I'm 49 and a bit on the paunchy side, and I haven't got the ball I used to have when I was in there tangling with Skang Mercurio, Billy Hess, and the rest of that gang. So I didn't expect to collect any wood at all.

"So I was loose as a goose and twice as happy when that pocket opened up and the wood began to fall.

"The gent who was really bowling was my partner, Harold Selby. When those splits are popping up like they were for Selby, you've got to bowl to get 469.

"He gets five splits to start out with. And turns in the 6-7-10 only to look at four more big ones in a row.

"Then he begins to get careful, and pressing, and he's really sweating blood shoving that cocoanut down the alley.

"The hot way I'm going, he thinks he's letting me down, and he's trying twice as hard as he would any other time. And I'm never so sorry for a bowler in my life as I am right then for Harold Selby.

"So I finally told him: 'Whattahell, this is all in fun. Get up there and slam that apple down the alley, and don't you ever care where it goes.'

"And he does just that, and, whammie!!, there's that thing hitting right in the old pocket, and I'm jumping up and down and yelling:

"'Boy, you've got her now!'

"'What do you mean, I've got her?' he groans as he turns away from the alley.

"And there's the eight and ten still standing!"

Kansas City Moves Into High Gear

(By Associated Press)

Billy Meyer's Kansas City Blues, after getting away to a slow start, are in high gear now as the American Association teams begin their first swing through the western half of the circuit.

The Blues took over third place yesterday with a 3 to 2 victory over Columbus, the Blues' third straight triumph and fourth in the last five games.

The Redbirds' defeat yesterday dropped Columbus into a fourth-place tie with Minneapolis which trimmed Indianapolis, 9 to 5.

* * *

St. Paul defeated Louisville, 10 to 3, scoring six runs in the seventh and four more in the ninth after Louisville had taken a 2-0 lead.

Toledo stayed abreast of the Saints in sixth place by whipping the lagging Milwaukee club, 4 to 3.

Flag Fever Mounts at Cleveland

Three Straight Wins Scored Over Champs.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians' pennant stock rose to its annual spring peak today as the red hot redskins aimed their tomahawks at the humble Philadelphia Athletics.

Three consecutive victories over the champion Tigers put the tribe in first place and the fans in a title mood. Al Milnar completed the Detroit rout yesterday by beating the Bengals 7 to 2 on six-hit pitching.

Southpaw Al Smith who has given up only two runs in two games, drew the task of getting Cleveland off on the right foot against the eastern invaders. Connie Mack named Buck Ross.

Manager Roger Peckinpaugh said Jeff Heath would play left field until Gerry Walker, who strained his back in the final Detroit game, is able to return. Beau Bell will remain in right field.

Peckinpaugh also announced his tentative pitching lineup for the rest of the week. Jim Bagby will hurl tomorrow with Bob Feller closing the Philadelphia series Thursday. Mel Harder and Milnar are expected to pitch the Boston games Friday and Saturday.

Little Roy Weatherly, fleet Cleveland center fielder, was the big gunner in the Cleveland attack. He got two hits and drove in three runs, his sixth inning single cleaning the bases. The usual sight of three runners scoring on a one-base hits resulted from a three-two count on Roy. With two men out, all the runners got started on the pitch.

Two walks, a wild pitch, an error and Ray Mack's single routed Harold Newhouser in the seventh inning and gave the Indians three more runs. They had opened run-making production in the fourth on Bell's triple and an infield out.

* * *

Successive doubles by Pinky Higgins and Tuck Stainback gave Detroit its first run in the fifth and two innings later Hank Greenberg doubled and scored on two infield outs.

SPRING TRIALS FOR BEAGLE HOUNDS SET

The Olentangy Beagle club will hold its annual spring all-age trial for beagles Sunday, May 4. The trial will of course be sanctioned by the American Kennel club.

The class for 13-inch dogs will be drawn first starting at 8 a. m. to be followed by 15-inch probably at 12 noon. Judging will be done by E. C. Bywater, master of the hounds at Hunting Hill kennels of Chagrin Falls, assisted by Carl Willis, local fancier.

Rumors Fly On Colt's Injury

Blue Pair Reported Out Of Kentucky Derby.

By SID FEDER

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — (AP) — Topping off the list of circumstances that makes the 'different Derby," a report went the rounds today that the Derby trial mile this afternoon may uncover an injury to keep the $40,000 Blue Pair out of Saturday's run for the roses.

Starting from apparently well founded sources, this rumor said the colt that Tob Bragg, the California and New York investment broker, bought from C. C. Van Meter for $40,000 less than two weeks ago had turned up with a splint ailment and a sore back and that his performance in the annual mile "preview" would decide his chances of getting to the post Saturday.

Trainer Willie Crump refused to discuss the whole thing, but it was noted that the atmosphere around Blue Pair's stable was not of the holiday variety that usually stamps an optimistic Derby barn.

At any rate this possibility and the showing—if any—of a colt named Sporting, purchased recently by Dan Withers of Chicago, are the only factors which save today's trial stake from being just a $2,500 workout.

So far as Warren Wright's Whirlaway and the four others in the field of seven are concerned the whole thing might just as well be a barn dance. Because Whirlaway, to be ridden by Eddie Arcaro Saturday, will go to the post Saturday, win, lose or scratch today, and the other quartet—Cadmium, Shaun G, Quintillian and Burman—won't get in the Derby even through the back door, according to their handlers.

Sporting bought by Withers from V. V. Long, arrived at the Downs a day or so ago and no one around knows much about him. He ran as a $2,500 selling plater at Oaklawn as recent as March 1, and just why Withers thinks he has a chance in the "big leat" is one of the little mysteries that make this 67th Derby as bizarre as it now shapes up.

Club league bowlers will hold their annual dinner tonight at 6:30 at the Liederkranz hall.

Uncle Sam's army soon will gain several top-flight major league baseball players, judging by their placements in Class 1-A. Hank Greenberg, Tiger star, is the biggest name ready to go. Hank, however, will continue to draw his reported $50,000 salary from the Tigers, according to word from Owner Walter Briggs. The Washington president, Clark Griffith, is up in arms for he stands to lose his two stars, Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis, the highest paid men on the team. Their salaries, however, will be discontinued when they enter the army. John Rigney, White Sox pitching star, is Class 1-A, too. Hugh Mulcahy, the Phillies' ace, already is in the army.

Speedy Kayo Hurts Boxing

That's Opinion of Jim Coffroth, Ex-Promoter.

SAN DIEGO, Cal. — (INS) — "There's such a thing as a fighter knocking out his opponents too quickly to be a drawing card." That's what former race track and fight Promoter James W. Coffront said at his home here today.

The "Sunny Jim" of some of the greatest sports promotions of other years was talking about recent Joe Louis bouts and the willingness of cash customers to turn out even for obscure challengers.

"Fans want fights to last long enough to give them a run for their money," he continued. "Louis doesn't finish his men quickly. The fellow who buys a ticket can figure on several rounds at least. Remember Stanley Ketchell? He didn't draw because he belted them to sleep before the customer could find a seat."

Besides his ring promotions, Coffroth originated the $100,000 horse race. After the turn of the century he staged some of the epochal fights of all times, with Heavyweight Champion Jim Jeffries often in the role of principal. San Francisco, the scene of his promotions at the time, was the mecca of the boxing world.

"In 1900, the Horton law killed boxing in New York state," he continued. "The odor from the Terry McGovern-Joe Gans bout in Chicago prompted the Illinois legislature to ban fighting there. Philadelphia had only six-round, no-decision matches. So boxers and managers came to San Francisco."

NEW YORK — (The Special News Service)—More than half of the guys on Snorty Luster's Oklahoma U. grid squad are looking for their draft numbers to go up. . . . Did you know that the only time Whirlaway whipped Our Boots in four tries last year was the only race in which "The Boots" wasn't ridden by either Carroll Bierman or Eddie Arcaro? . . . New York boxing commission is listing fighters who are consistent losers and will revoke their licenses. Yep, a heap of small fry managers are mighty indignant and are getting ready to go on relief. . . . First serious football casualty is Steve Juzwick, Notre Dame's high scorer last year, who broke an arm in scrimmage the other day.

Columbia is looking for someone to fill the role of Forest Evashevski in the forthcoming movie, "Tom Harmon of Michigan." Well, Ed Trevor of the Broadway hit, "Lady In the Dark," is a dead ringer for Evashevski—in the face, anway. . . . Each of the 15 rooms in Joe Louis' ranch house boasts a juke box. John Punches For Mitt Bill

State Boxing Measure Passed By Senate.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Senator John Kilbane of Cleveland, former world's featherweight boxing champion, began some fast punching today to get his fight bill through the house of representatives before the legislature quits work May 8.

The measure, setting up a three-member state athletic commission with sole jurisdiction over boxing and wrestling, was passed by the senate last night, 28 to 2.

The dissenting votes were cast by Senators Joseph Jameson (R-Lorain) and Horace S. Keifer (R-Springfield).

Kilbane, white-haired but still a lively stepper, asserted he would seek permission to speak for his bill on the house floor, a rather unusual privilege.

He told the senate last night that the measure would clean up a "very bad condition" in which "greedy hounds with diamond rings" sought to control the boxing game.

The proposed commission would be empowered to license all boxing and wrestling matches, the fighters, managers, promoters and handlers; a tax of 6 per cent would be levied on receipts, and anyone who operated without a license or staged a fake match would become liable to a fine of $1,000 to $10,000.

The bill also would remove all doubt as to the legality of prize-fighting.

ABC SETTLES AFTER WEEK-END SPLURGE

ST. PAUL — (INS) — After a heavy dose of excitement over the week-end including a 745 singles series by Fred Ruff of Belleville, Ill., for a new high in individual event, a lull settled temporarily over the American Bowling Congress today.

Leaders remained unchanged yesterday, when the best score was turned in by the Stegemaier Five of Wilkes Barre, Pa., A 2,940 count which was not quite enough to hit the big money. Second high for the day was 2,922, bowled in the five-man division by the De Luxe Dye works squad of Detroit.

Outfielders Arrive Early

Two Braves Gardeners Report For Drills.

Infielders and gardeners of the Mansfield Braves aren't due to report to Manager Alex Clowson until Thursday, but when the early-bird squad of batterymen arrived at the Fairground ball yard yesterday to go through their daily paces, there were two pasture patrolmen waiting for them.

Bill McGrath and Elmer Sielski, Cleveland youngster, just couldn't wait for that Thursday call, so now they are working out with the rest of the gang and expect to have plenty of early foot to show their competitors for outfield berths.

* * *

Since the outfield is the one thing that's really worrying Chief Alex—last year's fly-chasing trio was completely broken up—he was happy enough to see the ambitious pair.

McGrath is a right-hander all the way, and Sielski a port-sider.

Dean Dawson, who hurled last summer for Shiloh and Ontario, also was a newcomer in the Braves' tepee.

All of the boys who have now had nearly a week's training under Clowson's watchful eye were reported in good condition today and ready to show the rest of the Tribe some free-wheeling mound stuff when they arrive.

All were in good shape, that is, with the exception of Harold Robison, Erie, Pa., flinger, who was forced out of action yesterday by a sore throat.

Business Manager Oscar Ruhl has been trying to book exhibition games with Wooster, Ashland and Kenyon colleges to give the Braves a taste of competition before their opener here May 14 with Lima.

On Saturday, May 10, the Bellville Independents are scheduled to tangle with the Braves at the Fairground, and on Sunday, May 11, Ontario is booked for an exhibition tilt.

Brooklyn Trips Reds In Opener

Writer Says Foes Show Improvement For '41.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

The Cincinnati Reds last year were world champions, and they may be again, but it must be said at this early date that other teams have improved while the Reds have remained stationary.

* * *

The champs came east yesterday and bumped into the Brooklyn Dodgers, one of the National league's improved clubs. Their clash was a battle of titans, but the Dodgers emerged with their seventh successful victory, 3-2, and took over first place in the senior circuit, while the Reds were left languishing in fourth place.

The Reds had good pitching—a six-hit job by their veteran ace, Paul Derringer. They had their customary flawless fielding—including one of the most spectacular catches of the young season when Ival (Poison Ivy) Goodman stood almost against the rightfield fence, 300 feet from the plate, and jumped high to spear a liner in the sixth inning. They had as good an offense as the Dodgers—six hits, including a home run by Buck McCormick.

Whitlow Wyatt, near 31 years of age and getting bald, struck out ten of the champs and held them to six hits, too. When McCormick's homer put the Reds in front, the Dodgers had what it took to get back in front—a single by Jim Wasdell and a home run by Alex Kampouris, who led the International league in circuit-swatting last year. When the Reds tied the score through Ernesto Natali Lombardi's triple in the seventh, the Dodgers had what was needed to win in the ninth—a single with two on by old Whit Wyatt himself.

The Reds haven't skidded, but to finish 12 games in front of the Dodgers last year they had to win 41 games by one run and Brooklyn had to fall into a lot of trouble like Joe Medwick's beaning, Harry Lavagetto's appendicitis operation, Wyatt's sore arm and Peewee Reese's broken heel bone.

You can bet that the fighting is going to be a lot fiercer this year. The St. Louis Cardinals are in the middle of it, also.

The American league action has switched to the west. While the eastern teams were traveling yesterday, the Cleveland Indians reinforced their grip on first place by drubbing the Detroit Tigers, 7-2. The Chicago White Sox moved into a third-place tie with a 2-1 edge over the St. Louis Browns.

Boy Bandit.

Showing a boy bandit of seven who robs a filling station and pawnshop may seem far-fetched but the role of "Flip," child robber in "Men of Boys Town," at the Ohio, was taken from life.

Darryl Hickman portrayed the character in the film which stars Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney. The part of "Flip" was written from a case in Father Flanagan's files and tells the tale of the youngest hold-up "man" in the annals of crime. In real life the boy was taken to Boy's Town and grew up to be a respectable citizen.

The Aldrich Family.

"Life With Henry," an Aldrich family picture with Jackie Cooper in the starring role, opens Wednesday at the Madison. It continues the comic always well-meant misadventures of the hapless Henry, this time dealing with his activities in trying to qualify for a trip to Alaska. Hedda Hopper and Fred Niblo, sr., play the parents and the cast includes Etta McDaniel, sister of Hattie. Charlie Chan again exercises his Oriental sagacity in "Dead Men Tell," the second feature.

Tarkington Tale.

Both Tarkington's "Father's Son," story of a prankish boy who wears on his father's nerves, is the current attraction at the Ritz. John Litel and Billy Dawson are cast in the role of father and son and Frieda Inescort plays the mother. Domestic discord in the home reaches a climax when Billy runs away and then decides to patch up things at home again.

Comedy Continues.

"No, No, Nanette," continues at the Park with Roland Young in the role of a well-meaning millionaire who becomes involved with first one gold-digger and then another. Anna Neagle as "Nanette," his niece, attempts to extricate him from their clutches, with the assistance of Richard Carlson, Helen Broderick and Zasu Pitts. Tunes from the stage musical are woven through the picture. Gene Autry in "Riding On a Rainbow," is the co-attraction.

"Four Mothers," a follow-up on the popular "Four Daughters," opens today at the Majestic with the three Lane Sisters, Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola also Gale Page in the title roles. Their respective husbands are played by Jeffrey Lynn, Eddie Albert, Frank McHugh and Dick Foran. May Robson and Claude Rains are others in the play of typical family life. "Foreign Correspondent," with Joel McCrea, Herbert Marshall, and Laraine Day is the second picture.

Appleseed Pupils To Model Fashions At School Show

Latest in fashions will be modeled by pupils of the ninth grade home economics classes at Johnny Appleseed Junior high school Wednesday at 10 a. m. as the pupils present a style show in the school auditorium.

Clothes suitable for three different times of the day will be modeled by the pupils. The first group will display pajamas and house coats for morning wear. Slacks and play suits for sport occasions will compose the second scene; and afternoon dress will be modeled by the third group.

Directed by Edna Tucker, 11 pupils will take part in the program.

LATIN POPULAR

KENT, O.—(UP)—Latin, often considered a "dead" language, nevertheless is so popular in colleges that the demand for teachers far exceeds the supply, according to Dr. Lester H. Munzenmayer, of Kent State University.

"Surveys show that if a student can succeed in Latin or in science he probably will make a success of his entire college program and will do a thorough job of educating himself," said Dr. Munzenmayer, director of teacher placement at the university.

SALE TO OPEN

Start Issuance of Cigaret Licenses Thursday.

Cigaret licenses for 1941-42 will go on sale Thursday at the county auditor's office in the courthouse, Auditor Norman L. Wolfe said today.

Approximately 400 retail vendors in the county must obtain permits at $25 each and wholesalers must purchase licenses at $100 each. The new permits must be exhibited by Monday, May 26.

The auditor said the sale of licenses produced about $10,000 last year. Half of the funds from the permits goes to the state and the other half is divided equally between the county and the district in which the money is collected.

Wolfe said over half of the retail licenses now go to establishments which operate cigaret vending machines.

BREAKING OF MINE STRIKE AIDS MARKET

Recovery Tendencies Center on Steels, Rails, and Specialty Groups.

NEW YORK—Further recovery tendencies seeped into the stock market today, centering on steels, rails and specialties.

Favored issues in early bidding included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Sperry, United Aircraft, Anaconda, J. C. Penney and Sears Roebuck.

Bonds and commodities displayed moderately rising inclinations.

Breaking of the soft coal mining deadlock was the main bolstering influence for speculative sentiment, brokers said.

Boardrooms saw nothing particularly disturbing in the figures of Federal Reserve member banks in 101 cities for the week ended April 23 disclosing the first drop in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans since the latter part of September.

Financial analysts explained that the let-down, after the unprecedented lengthy rise, was due almost entirely to seasonal influences and did not necessarily mean a flattening out of the business curve.

SHIPS AND GUNS ON 'INVASION' COAST BATTLE

Heaviest Bombardment of War Reported In England as Nazis Plan Crete Drive.

80 miles west of the Egyptian border.

With the B. E. F. contingent proceeding in its withdrawal from the Greek Peloponnesus—described by Australia's Acting Prime Minister A. W. Fadden as "conducting themselves with great heroism in the face of heavy pressure"—attention centered on Germany's heralded plan to attack Crete.

Informed Germans regarded the long, narrow island as a springboard from which Alexandria, Port Said and the Suez canal could be threatened seriously.

Morning newspapers in England said Nazi occupation of Greece's Aegean islands—the Germans already have claimed Samothrace, Lemnos and Thasos—might afford stepping stones linked conveniently with Italy's Dodecanese islands, from which the Nazis might move into French-mandated Syria, thence toward Suez from the east.

Thus, some of the papers said, the Germans could leap-frog past the Dardanelles, which the Turks have declared was guarded by a million bayonets.

Fighting continued only on the Peloponnesus in the south of Greece, sketchy reports indicating the Germans were still pursuing the last of the B. E. F. as it fell back toward "escape" ports.

That the war was back on a "nerves" basis was indicated by widespread guessing about Hitler's next immediate move.

Canadian Prime Minister MacKenzie King, speaking to the house of commons in Ottawa yesterday, named points from Singapore to Gibraltar as possible German objectives. Some circles in Washington were inclined to agree with British Prime Minister Winston Churchill that no matter what the Germans do elsewhere, they must win in the Atlantic to defeat England.

There were hints in London parliamentary circles that Britain's reverses in the Balkans might mean the abandonment of Churchill's eight-man war cabinet in favor of a four or five-man organization including Churchill, MacKenzie King of Canada, Robert G. Menzies, Australian prime minister, and Jan Christiaan Smuts, South African prime minister.

The Luftwaffe came back again over repeatedly-bombed Plymouth last night in a two-hour attack. The RAF reported striking again at Brest, much-bombed port where the German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau are reported tied up, perhaps damaged.

Nazis Sharply Warn Switzerland Press

BERLIN—(ANS)—Nazi Germany today delivered a sharp warning to peaceful Switzerland against its allegedly unneutral attitude.

The admonition was directed particularly to the Swiss press, which was accused of voicing "undue, provocative and insulting charges" against the reich.

Germany harbors no aggressive intentions toward Switzerland, a spokesman insisted, but in the future the press must refrain from undue criticism.

Scoring the Swiss government's "inability to bridle the press," the spokesman said:

"It is incomprehensible how a small country, against which we harbor no hostile intentions, can continuously and maliciously disturb European harmony by beating a big drum in warning against alleged menaces.

"It seems as though certain Swiss circles are intent upon driving their country into hopeless isolation."

GETS VIEW OF BATTLE AT SEA

Downs, Noted Reporter, Finds Himself In Midst of War on Atlantic.

with an important convoy. I was aboard an armed merchant ship headed for Cairo as were some of the army officers aboard. (Fifteen words censored). The convoy was en route to parts unknown.

I had been on submarine watch from 8 a. m., until noon and had watched a gentle sea grow increasingly heavy. By noon the ocean was embroidered with whitecaps. The former American destroyer off to our right was wallowing heavily.

It made my stomach feel funny even to look at it. My stomach would have felt funnier had I dreamed that before the day was over I'd be aboard that destroyer in still heavier seas.

At 2:50 p. m., the fire alarm sounded. I didn't hear it. After a large lunch I had dozed off but Lieut. Barter shook me awake and said:

"There's a fire in one of the stoke-holds and it's supposed to be serious. Better get your life belt."

Heavy, greasy smoke already filled the boat deck as I went (word censored) for my lifebelt. I heard the bugler give the "abandon ship stations' signal.

There were half a dozen army officers as well as the seamen for our boat. None believed the fire could be serious. It just didn't seem plausible that we might have to quit this ship because of an ordinary fire, with no visible enemy action.

Nevertheless, by 3:15 p. m., (fifteen words censored.) We took serious note of the sea (one word censored.) It was really heaving. The destroyer pulled around to our side, the port side, about a furlong away. Following the example of the seamen around me I shucked my coat, unlaced my shoes. The ship's whistle began a loud, continuous moan.

"That's to let the steam out of the boilers," one of the seamen explained. "Worst danger is boiler explosion."

Lieut. Barter, who also was assigned to my boat, came along and said in his pleasant way:

"I understand it's really bad. We'll probably have to go off."

He grinned.

The lifeboats were swung down at 3:40 p. m. and the chief officer quietly gave the 'abandon ship' order. In quick but orderly fashion the army officers and seamen and two ships' officers scrambled over the rail and into the swinging boat. Barter and I were the last. I said to him:

"Go ahead."

With a mock bow he replied:

"After you, old boy."

We got into the stern and they began lowering us. We slipped down in uneven jerks and with one roll of the ship we would be swung far out and the next come smacking back against its side.

Like a spider slipping down a web, one seaman who hadn't arrived at his station on time came swinging down on a lifeline. He swung out with each roll, the way we did in our boat, and I held my breath each time he smashed back to the ship. He finally dropped into our boat.

When finally we felt the first smack of the sea against the bottom of our boat, the usual thing happened: The rear block wouldn't release. We were hung like a banana by the stern and it seemed the whole lot would be dumped into the water.

However, the stubborn pin came loose and we were afloat. The water in our boat came almost to my knees. We were within about four inches of capsizing. As the seamen pulled away at the oars, we bailed with our caps.

Lewis At Coal Parley

John L. Lewis, president of the CIO United Mine Workers' union, is pictured as he testified in Washington before a senate committee investigating the coal stoppage. Lewis told the committee members that the mines could be immediately opened if the southern operators would eliminate their north-south wage differential demand. Miners To Be Back In Pits In 24 Hours; Southern Operators Boost Pay.

UMW on a retroactive basis to the date of resumption.

The decision of the southern operators to put a $1 a day wage boost into effect at once—raising the southern rate to $6.60—provided a surprise to most of the mine union officials since the president had not asked for any wage change in his back-to-work proposal a week ago.

The decision of the southern operators was reached after a night conference which followed a visit with Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones and a senate committee inquiry into the cause of the mine shutdown.

As one operator explained it, the commerce chief told the southern producers bluntly that "something has to be done and done quickly."

The northern producers and the UMW, already in agreement on a new $7 a day wage scale, had announced their readiness a week ago to accept the president's reopening plan, which provided that the northern mines reopen on the basis of the agreement already worked out.

Southern operators explained that they voted to put the $1 a day wage boost into effect immediately by saying that it would reduce their contingent liability if and when further negotiations with the union should result in a higher wage rate and thus higher production costs.

The union is aiming for a $7 a day basic wage in southern mines to match the $7 rate granted by northern producers, and thus wipe out a 40 cent differential which has been one of the major stumbling blocks to the completion of a two year wage agreement covering all soft coal mining. Under the contract which expired April 1, the north paid $6 a day.

Thus the 40-cent differential issue still faces the union and southern negotiators on a retroactive basis, along with other features of the northern agreement which southern producers said they found objectionable.

The acceptance of the president's reopening plan came in the wake of reports that steel production was being cut because of lowering fuel supplies and railroads were reported running short of coal for transportation service.

OK'S WATER FOR EMPIRE PLANT

whether an emergency exists would be determined by the city.

The proposal was first presented to Mayor William J. Locke by company officials. They informed the city that they had plans for industrial expansion and had ordered $120,000 worth of new machinery. Mayor Locke referred the request to Councilman C. N. Shultz, chairman of the water committee. Shultz presented the problem to council at last night's meeting.

Because City Solicitor M. D. Ward, jr., was not present at the meeting, it was necessary to draw up the "gentlemen's agreement" instead of a regular ordinance. Ward said today that he had not been notified of the meeting.

Prompt action was needed, Mayor Locke and Shultz urged, because the company was working on several defense orders and wished to get the water as soon as possible.

The company would need between 340,000 and 350,000 gallons daily for its operations. A check on the old Longview well, not used by the city for more than two years, tested to 313,000 last week. At present, the company obtains its water for industrial use from its own wells. The water table on which its well are drilled has sunk to 30 feet.

The Longview well is on a different table. If the company purchased the water from the city at its lowest rate, the cost for 300,000 gallons, which the company would pump daily, would cost $30 daily or approximately $11,000 annually.

Shultz urged council to approve licensing the well arguing that the company was long-established here and the employer of a large number of persons. He also pointed out that the well was not now being used by the city.

City Engineer W. C. Statler told council that the only difficulty which might be faced would be the lowering of the water table by a drain of 300,000 gallons daily. He pointed out that the water was wasted in industrial use and did not return to the table.

The agreement provides that the well will be connected in such a way that upon immediate notice, the water may be turned into the city mains in case of an emergency.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, APRIL 29, 1941.

It's high time to be getting at whatever you planned to do in April.

Then again, Greenland seems like a peculiarly appropriate place for the proposed "cooling off" period.

The Balkans now move back into the Dark Ages, and lucky are the people from that region who were wise enough to move to America before the big trouble started.

For Proper Care of Unfortunates

WHILE the state legislature is rushing toward adjournment it may be hoped that speed will not be so great as to prevent favorable house consideration of a measure already passed by the senate and intended to correct intolerable conditions existing in state institutions devoted to care of insane, feeble minded, epileptic and mentally deficient persons.

In what has become known as the Whitacre bill, as passed last week by the state senate with only three dissenting votes, it is proposed to provide funds through issuance of bonds by a Building Authority to be created for that purpose.

It is contended by proponents that these bonds, to the amount of $12,000,000 would not add to taxes but would be paid off, over a 25-year period, out of amounts now paid by families of patients, out of money paid by each county and payments being made by the welfare department for each patient.

It is explained that out of the money NOW paid, the patients would first be treated and cared for, and the balance would be used to pay off the bonds.

State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood has expressed belief that such a plan will make it possible to provide suitable accommodations for 12,000 unfortunates, many of whom, because of inadequate facilities, are now being housed in penal institutions.

Those fortunate persons who are blessed with good health and a sound mind have no greater responsibility than that involved in providing humane care for those others who, by prank of fate, are so physically or mentally handicapped as to require institutional care.

Ohio, as a great state, can no longer afford to rest under the stigma of such inadequacy as now exists in its institutions for unfortunates.

Another Picture About Boys Town

MORE about the work and problems of Father Edward J. Flanagan, founder of Boys Town, finds its way to the screen in the new picture, "Men of Boys Town," now being locally shown.

This picture, as did its predecessor, provides more than enjoyable entertainment. It not only brings to public attention the fine accomplishments of Father Flanagan at Boys Town, Nebraska, but it also points the way to possibilities for the rehabilitation of underprivileged or delinquent children in every state.

While the financial difficulties encountered by Father Flanagan are brought to light in this picture, his dream of a spread of the idea into many other communities is also presented in an appealing way.

Coming at a time when Probate Judge Cramer is directing attention to the seriousness of juvenile delinquency problems in Mansfield, with appointment of an advisory committee to aid him in this phase of his work, "Men of Boys Town" may serve a valuable purpose in pointing the way to opportunities for individual co-operation in helping young people over some of the difficult spots in their progress from childhood to maturity.

As encouragement to such activity it is well to keep in mind Father Flanagan's theory: "I have always contended there is no such thing as a bad boy. In my twenty-five years of dealing with youth I have never encountered a truly bad boy."

Millionaire Prospects Fade

A STATEMENT recently made by Henry H. Heinman, manager of the National Association of Credit Men, may be either depressing or cheering, depending entirely on individual views.

"We must recognize," he said, "that the old social philosophy is gone forever. Probably never again will anyone accumulate a hundred million dollars. Heavier taxes and a new philosophy of life will be against it."

While being deprived of opportunity to accumulate a hundred million dollars may not impress many people as being a great hardship, ideas of what should be a legitimate maximum of individual or family wealth will probably vary considerably.

Unless the acquisitive talents required to become "wealthy" are associated with philanthropic, charitable and humanitarian traits of character which inspire use of wealth for the common good, there can be little justification for such extremely large family fortunes as have heretofore been permitted to pass from generation to generation, without requirement for productive work on the part of beneficiaries.

Particularly stigmatized, in recent thinking, has been the accumulation of wealth by questionable speculative methods, business or political chicanery and underworld or borderline racketeering such as is sometimes condoned but never approved.

Rumania Decides To 'Come Clean'

SOME IDEA of the exent to which "personal liberty can be infringed upon is gained from a Bucharest item to the effect that, by government edict, everybody in Rumania "must take a bath by Thursday midnight at the latest."

This may be a matter that has been postponed from year to year, or it may merely be a method adopted to distinguish natives from invaders—but, in any event, it should serve to arouse Russians to the seriousness of the situation.

According to a recent estimate there's slightly less than one rat for each person in the United States—but that's a shortage about which there's not likely to be any complaint.

Constance Bennett's recent fourth marriage is another indication of the difficulty of choosing a suitable name for the baby.

It's Mr. Knudsen's idea that "the greatest need today is time"—but some folks seem to think it's time-and-a-half.

Some college professors become unpopular by pretending to know more than the students.

Not Packing Bags

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

"HOW," says she, "can you go on writing about justice and truth and decency in the face of that horror overseas? How can you advise people to have faith in a God? Do you suppose if there were a God He'd let helpless women, children and old people be bombed and brave men be massacred by the thousands?

"I admit I had faith once, but this war has wiped it all out. I don't believe in anything now; just go on living from hour to hour."

Sounds familiar, doesn't it? Chances are you've been asking the same questions yourself, feeling the same sick rage and desolation creeping over you. Most of us have. And many's the time I would gladly swap jobs with the village idiot, just to duck the facts I dare not face. Then something will come along.

Take that recent case of the Danish minister to Washington. You remember — concerning Greenland—and Minister Henrik de Kaufmann had been ordered home. Theoretically, that order came from Denmark, but her minister well knew that it was dictated by Nazi hate and greed. It was not healthy to challenge that hate and greed. Those who did were apt to die prompt and unpleasant deaths, even on American soil. A cautious man might save both his face and his hide by speedy obedience and none would censure him.

These thoughts must have rushed swiftly through Henrik de Kaufmann's mind as he read that ominous command and thought of the Power that loomed behind it, monstrous, malignant. Nation after nation had gone down before that Power. What chance had one man?

And then, as swiftly, there must have come another thought. The Nazis could kill his body, yes. But with all their might there were certain things they could not take from a man. His self-respect, for instance. His sense of honor and his love of decency. His courage and his deep, fierce will to serve the country that he loved. These things no man need lose. He could not pierce the blackout of a world. But he could stand firm on himself, despite that blackout.

And so Henrik de Kaufmann raised his face to the waiting reporters and quietly said six of the bravest words any man ever uttered:

"I AM NOT PACKING MY BAGS!"

And that, partner, as I see it, is the one position you and I can take in this nightmare of hate and doubt that's confronting us all.

I don't know the answers. But I still like the ones I've always loved, better than any I've heard from the other side—and I'm going to hang right on to them. I can't see the trail ahead. And it may be that I never shall see it. But there's one thing I can do—I can stick! I can refuse to sell out on myself. I admit I'm no bargain—but such as I am, I'm going to bet on Elsie and what has always made her tick. And no blood-smeared mechanized monster is going to make me cry "Uncle."

I AM NOT PACKING MY BAGS.

Timely Editorial

One Defense Was Ready.

At this time of crisis there is solid satisfaction in the fact that the great base at Singapore is found ready when needed. The whole empire has cause for congratulation that in the years after the last war, when public opinion turned toward pacifism, collecuve security and disarmament, the Singapore project was adopted by the British Parliament and steadily, if slowly, brought to completion.

The base was opened just three years ago and the empire east of Suez has especial reason to be grateful to those in London who since 1923 possessed the foresight and the courage to breast waves of popular opinion in proceeding with the work.

New Zealand can feel proud that she reinforced the project by promising a contribution of one million pounds and by keeping up her installments in good years and bad. Now everyone can appreciate the wisdom of that policy and reap a reward in the added security afforded by the strong defensive bastion of Singapore.—Auckland, New Zealand, News.

This Is Ohio

THE first industrial school on the American continent was started among the Wyandot Indians by the Rev. James B. Finley, who came to the Upper Sandusky mission in 1821.

His first work was the building of a log mission and school house where Indian girls were taught to cook, bake and sew. Outside, in field, at anvil, and at bench, the young braves learned the trades of civilization. In 1824, Bishop Joshua Soule of the Methodist Episcopal church visited the mission on the west side of the Sandusky river, one mile below Upper Sandusky. He found 60 acres of corn growing, a crop of wheat, oats and flax just hasvested, and 10 cows in the pasture.

Industrial training also was popular among the adult Indians. They would visit the mission school and imitate its methods in agriculture, building and buttermaking.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Few British Troops Aided Greece With Big Army Idle In England

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Biggest question mark along Wall Street these days is: "Will the British hold out?"

Accustomed to selling short when disaster seems just around the corner, Wall Street views the fate of England as a cold-blooded investment in the future. And judging by the bungling of certain British leaders, Wall Street pessimism would appear to be justified.

Inside information is that General Wavell sent only two divisions of Australian-New Zealand troops to Greece—a total of about 20,000 men. In addition he had one English army service corps, which is for supplies, repairs, hospitalization, etc., for troops in the field. Total, with RAF fliers, ground crews: not more than 50,000 men.

This force was pitted against at least 300,000 well-trained Nazis; nearer 500,000 counting reserves in Bulgaria.

It is true that the British could not spare any more Anzacs from North Africa, but there were 2,000,000 men under arms in the British Isles. That the British lacked planes and tanks was not their fault, but the failure to send men from England is inexplicable; for 2,000,000 men simply fall over each other in defending a small area like the British Isles.

These are errors which may not be cleared up until Churchill and General Wavell write their memoirs. Meanwhile there is one favorable factor, on which Wall Street does not usually reckon, namely the human factor—stamina, nerve, or to use a good old English word, guts.

Significant illustration is the British embassy in Washington. Badly in need of English clerks, the embassy canont keep its subjects from going back to England. Women stenographers, clerks don't want to remain here. They want to go back to fight and die in their homeland. If England is going to fall they want to fall with it.

The days of fighting with bare fists and pitch-forks are over. Nevertheless there is something about this bulldog determination which may win out in the end. After all, it is the same spirit which led to the conquest of America.

Territorial Bases.

THE island bases of the United States are now considered our best safeguard against invasion. But the army and navy brasshats will get a scorching rebuke in a report soon to be made public by the house appropriations subcommittee that inspected territorial bases.

Written by Representative James G. Scrugham of Nevada, chairman of the group, the report will vigorously recommend the immediate creation of an "independent air force." This would be intended to correct two chief abuses:

(1) The location of army and navy bases almost side by side in flat, unprotected country, thus "inviting destruction by enemy bombs." (2) Failure to build hangars, repair shops and other facilities underground.

Regarding the first criticism the Scrugham report will state: "This policy of concentrating highly essential military or industrial structures in very limited areas cannot be too strongly condemned, and may constitute an error of gravest consequences. This is as true in our territorial as well as our continental defenses.

"The lesson of the destruction of the Polish air forces by the Germans at the beginning of the war seems to have gone entirely unheeded (by the aeronautic bureau chiefs responsible). In a flat country, protected air facilities may be impractical, but where there are adjacent hills, it seems inexcusable to deliberately build . . . bases invitingly located for bombing attacks, and so close together that an enemy plane can hit one if it misses the other.

"Everywhere the story is the same, from Hawaii to Puerto Rico, from Alaska to the Virgin Islands, Jamaica and Trinidad. Also, no adequate plans have been formulated for water reserves, except to contract for drilling a few wells, with grave uncertainties as to quality and quantities."

Scrugham's conclusions will be that a "tragedy of the first magnitude" may develop unless immediate steps are taken to rectify conditions at the territorial bases. His solution is the centralization of all military air forces under a single head with cabinet rank.

Bathing Rum.

THE lack of water at the bases was brought home forcibly to the committee when visiting the Virgin Islands.

First request of the group was to be ushered to the nearest shower baths. "Sorry," apologized the welcoming officer, "but our showers aren't in operation. You see, there is an acute water shortage here."

He pointed to several natives plodding by with five-gallon jugs of water balanced on their heads.

"That's drinking water," he explained. "They get it at a spring five miles from here. We catch our water for bathing in cisterns, but it hasn't rained here for so long that we've run out."

"Well, what do you do about bathing?" asked Scrugham.

"We bathe in rum," was the cheerful reply. "We buy what we call 'bathing rum' for 25 cents a gallon at the general store in town."

Note — Drinking water is a problem on many West Indian islands, and is caught by huge concrete "catchments" which cover the hills and divert every drop of rain into cisterns.

CIO Mediation Subs.

THE president has been under considerable public criticism for appointing CIO leaders to the National Defense Mediation board. But the public doesn't know the half of it.

Real fact is that CIO members Phil Murray and Thomas Kennedy have been sending in unauthorized substitutes to act for them on the board. Except for the first meeting, when they sat for their pictures, Murray and Kennedy have been conspicuous by their absence.

Anticipating this, the president, when he set up the board, designated an alternate for each of the eleven members. The CIO alternates were Emil Rieve, head of the textile workers, and Clinton Golden, regional director of the steel workers organizing committee. If these two always filled in for Murray and Kennedy, there would be no complaint.

But more often than not, Murray designates pinch-hitters who, technically, have no right to sit on the board. Among them have been Allen Haywood, CIO organization director; Anthony Smith, CIO assistant counsel; and John Brophy, director of industrial union councils.

What particularly gripes the board members is that Haywood was originally proposed by Murray as a substitute and Roosevelt rejected him. When the president asked for recommendations, Murray sent in his own name at the instigation of John L. Lewis.

Note—Inside word in the Defense Mediation board is that the next time Haywood, close henchman of Lewis, shows up his right to sit will be challenged.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The late Sidney Howard was a big, friendly, blond-headed, resolute, forthright sort of character who loathed pussy-footers and who believed in giving you the shirt off his back if you deserved it.

When he met a tragic death on a farm a few years ago his great and good friend Robert E. Sherwood and other members of the Playwrights Company created a Sidney Howard fund, to be given annually to some deserving, needy young playwright.

Last season this award, which amounts to $1,500, went to Robert Ardrey, but this year it has been turned over to the Authors League Fund with provision that it be used to aid deserving young dramatists.

I well recall the day Howard arrived in a blue funk at Grand Central Station after "It Can't Happen Here" had been barred from the screen by the Hays office. There had been a protest from Italy, and the Hays office decided that the story was to be junked. Howard had been on the coast dramatizing the Sinclair Lewis novel for the screen. When he heard that it had been called off he hurried to New York, and the "quotes" he gave the reporters who met him at the train sizzled the Broadway columns for days.

Howard, though he wrote a number of original dramas, is best remembered for his dramatizations of novels. He dramatized "Dodsworth" from the Sinclair Lewis novel, and he wrote the screen adaptation of "Gone With the Wind." Shortly after this he figured in that tragic episode that left Broadway so bewildered and stunned. On a rural retreat, kicking about a farm, he was crushed against a barn wall by a five ton tractor. He never knew what hit him.

New York has had Russian, Hawaiian, Spanish, French, and Hungarian nightclubs, but now it has its first opportunity to glimpse an all-Chinese club—the Forbidden City, operated by Bill Poy Lee of Chinatown, New York, N. The entertainment runs to mystic exhibitions and Chinese dances as performed by Miss Hoo Shee to crooners of exotic Oriental melodies. P. S. The chef is a Hindu.

A Farmer's Diary

Young Fishermen

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

AND now that spring has come, it is grand to live on Honey Creek! Peach trees are pink with bloom; moist red apple buds are beautiful in contrast with the tender leaves; white petals of juniper give fresh life and beauty to the wooded hills. Wheat fields wave in the warm south wind. The swamp yields a frog concert every night, and during the day red-winged blackbird, peewee and meadow lark feed there and sing and build their nests.

Often, after school, our two boys—ten and six—take up their handmade fishing poles that hang on the sagging wire fence, put them over their respective shoulders and march south across the soft green fields, to Honey Creek. One carries the rusty can of worms, both are in threadbare shirts and rolled up pantaloons—and I hear their voices faintly as they travel farther southward.

Bluets are in the grass beyond the old rail fence. The pasture is like a park. Here the creek loops back and forth between vivid sod banks and great elm trees arch along the farther bank. Beneath these elms, in a deep hole by a root, the fishermen throw in their lines. A robin in a thorn apple tree beside the swampy meadow edge begins to sing his evening song. Buttercups grow in vivid yellow clusters and the smaller boy, tired of fishing, fills his arms with them.

When the large red sun has set, and dusky twilight begins to fall, two tired fishers trek home along the edge of the plowed ground. The smaller carries both poles with the wet lines wound spirally around, while the older boy has a gallon pail which he shifts from one hand to the other frequently. The smaller brother hangs the poles on the fence and comes running up, where his mother and I are working. "Mom, we were fishing on the bank and all at once something called out from the water in a big coarse voice, "Butler rum, Butler rum!" The hair on both our heads felt funny and we moved on down the creek. We caught all these fish there in the bucket. They're all alive and swimmin'. If you say they're too little to fry, we can put them into the pond . . . But the biggest one—and he held his little hands apart nearly 18 inches—got away, just as we had him hooked and pulled out and all. He hit the bank and bounced!"

STALIN WON'T HELP ALLIES, SPEAKER SAYS

the democracies that Russia might help them is part of a deliberate policy of confusion. It is a psychological war of nerves that is reaching to every part of the world," Lyons asserted.

With hundreds of German engineers at work in Russia, keeping a watch over military and industrial developments, Hitler has no illusions about Russia's military and industrial forces, but he respects its propaganda machine, Lyons told the audience.

"That propaganda helped to tear down France and now it is busy in England and Latin America," he added. "In Latin American countries the Communists are teaching hatred of the Yankees to interfere with hemisphere unity and insert a wedge on this side of the ocean."

Lyons said he saw little chance that Hitler will fight Russia unless he fails to whip Great Britain and is "forced to turn against Russia to save his face."

If that happens, Hitler would take the course of Napoleon when he attacked Russia after his unsuccessful battle against England, he said.

"An illusion persists that the revolution against the Czar in Russia in 1917 brought about a better society, but Russia has changed much since then, and the enigma is in our minds and not in Russia," Lyons said.

"The cultural fronts in Russia that deceived the rest of the world after the revolution have been reversed and now there is a great raction against innovations and a social and economic reversal."

Stalin, who Lyons described as a worse dictator than any czar, has conducted a blood purge against Communist leaders in the past four or five years, making Russia an unhealthy place for Communists.

Lyons said from fifty to a hundred thousand Communists have been executed in the purge in a behind-the-scenes civil war that resulted from Stalin's move to change the order in Russia.

If Hitler succeeds in building his new world order—and Lyons predicted he won't—he can use Russia and Japan as policemen to help him keep Asia and the Pacific in line, Lyons continued.

He said the attack on Finland proved that Russia's military machine has numbers but it is an empty shell with no national morale to back it up.

In a question period following his talk, Lyons said the destinies of the United States are bound closely to the other democracies of the world and it is to our interests to help England defeat Hitler and Stalin and all they stand for.

Answering another question, he said the industrialism of Russia has taken millions of lives with countless people starving to death and thousands dying by the hands of executioners as the new order was put into effect.

Replying to another query, Lyons said he saw little hope of the countries Hitler has conquered revolting against him unless they can get the German armies to revolt with them.

"If Hitler is defeated, that may occur, but as long as he wins, the power of his mechanized forces will quell any attempted revolts among workers," Lyons asserted.

First American correspondent to interview Stalin, Lyons told the audience he found the Soviet dictator a "simple, pleasant, and slightly shy man" who talked to Lyons about his two children who were in school. "It was hard to believe that he could give orders that meant death to thousands," he added.

Unlike Hitler and Mussolini who are able speakers and can sway crowds. Stalin is uneducated and the retiring type who prefers to work quietly and away from public view, Lyons said.

Atty. William F. Black, representing the University club, was chairman of the meeting and introduced Lyons.

'BEER BARREL POLKA' LEADS IN WAR'S PARADE OF SONG HITS

LONDON—(UP)—Biggest song hit of this war is the "Beer Barrel Polka."

Canadian soldiers sang it when they debarked in England. Australian and New Zealand soldiers sang it when they filed down the gangplank in the Middle East. English soldiers sang it as they trudged through the mud of France. And shelter-dwellers in London sing it while the bombs whistle down about them.

So far it has sold nearly a million copies—and it's still a good seller.

Running a close second on England's "hit parade" is the American best-seller, "South of the Border," which, incidentally, was written by England's best known song-writing team, Jimmy Kennedy and Michael Carr. That, too, has sold nearly a half million copies.

Third place probably goes to "Wish Me Luck as You Wave Me Good-Bye," with which Gracie Fields, the English comedienne now in the United States, sang her way into the hearts of the British army, navy and air force. Some 450,000 copies have been sold.

Carr, working alone, wrote the song that is in fourth place, "Somewhere in France," whose popularity waned after the British retreat to Dunkirk. It sold 400,000 copies.

But none of the songs of this war approaches the sales of England's hits of the World war. For instance, "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," sold 5,000,000 copies, "Roses of Picardy," 3,000,000, and "Keep the Home Fires Burning," more than 1,000,000 copies.

Publishers attribute the drop in sales of hit songs to the radio, on which a popular song today is literally "played to death" in about 13 weeks, whereas during the last war the average life of a hit song was two years.

Milk Mixtures For Stomach Ulcers

A recent medical discovery now being used by doctors and hospitals everywhere has proven unusually successful in the treatment of stomach ulcers caused from excess acid. It is a harmless preparation yet so effective that in many cases the pains of stomach ulcers disappear almost immediately after it is used. Also recommended for gas pains, indigestion and heartburn due to hyperacidity. Sufferers may now try this at home by obtaining a bottle of Lurin from their druggist. Lurin contains this new discovery in its purest form. Easy to take. Just mix two teaspoonfuls in a half glass of milk. Costs but little and sold under an absolute guarantee that it must satisfy or money refunded. Lurin for sale by Weinberger's and drug stores everywhere.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, APRIL 29, 1941.

It's high time to be getting at whatever you planned to do in April.

Then again, Greenland seems like a peculiarly appropriate place for the proposed "cooling off" period.

The Balkans now move back into the Dark Ages, and lucky are the people from that region who were wise enough to move to America before the big trouble started.

For Proper Care of Unfortunates

WHILE the state legislature is rushing toward adjournment it may be hoped that speed will not be so great as to prevent favorable house consideration of a measure already passed by the senate and intended to correct intolerable conditions existing in state institutions devoted to care of insane, feeble minded, epileptic and mentally deficient persons.

In what has become known as the Whitacre bill, as passed last week by the state senate with only three dissenting votes, it is proposed to provide funds through issuance of bonds by a Building Authority to be created for that purpose.

It is contended by proponents that these bonds, to the amount of $12,000,000 would not add to taxes but would be paid off, over a 25-year period, out of amounts now paid by families of patients, out of money paid by each county and payments being made by the welfare department for each patient.

It is explained that out of the money NOW paid, the patients would first be treated and cared for, and the balance would be used to pay off the bonds.

State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood has expressed belief that such a plan will make it possible to provide suitable accommodations for 12,000 unfortunates, many of whom, because of inadequate facilities, are now being housed in penal institutions.

Those fortunate persons who are blessed with good health and a sound mind have no greater responsibility than that involved in providing humane care for those others who, by prank of fate, are so physically or mentally handicapped as to require institutional care.

Ohio, as a great state, can no longer afford to rest under the stigma of such inadequacy as now exists in its institutions for unfortunates.

Another Picture About Boys Town

MORE about the work and problems of Father Edward J. Flanagan, founder of Boys Town, finds its way to the screen in the new picture, "Men of Boys Town," now being locally shown.

This picture, as did its predecessor, provides more than enjoyable entertainment. It not only brings to public attention the fine accomplishments of Father Flanagan at Boys Town, Nebraska, but it also points the way to possibilities for the rehabilitation of underprivileged or delinquent children in every state.

While the financial difficulties encountered by Father Flanagan are brought to light in this picture, his dream of a spread of the idea into many other communities is also presented in an appealing way.

Coming at a time when Probate Judge Cramer is directing attention to the seriousness of juvenile delinquency problems in Mansfield, with appointment of an advisory committee to aid him in this phase of his work, "Men of Boys Town" may serve a valuable purpose in pointing the way to opportunities for individual co-operation in helping young people over some of the difficult spots in their progress from childhood to maturity.

As encouragement to such activity it is well to keep in mind Father Flanagan's theory: "I have always contended there is no such thing as a bad boy. In my twenty-five years of dealing with youth I have never encountered a truly bad boy."

Millionaire Prospects Fade

A STATEMENT recently made by Henry H. Heimann, manager of the National Association of Credit Men, may be either depressing or cheering, depending entirely on individual views.

"We must recognize," he said, "that the old social philosophy is gone forever. Probably never again will anyone accumulate a hundred million dollars. Heavier taxes and a new philosophy of life will be against it."

While being deprived of opportunity to accumulate a hundred million dollars may not impress many people as being a great hardship, ideas of what should be a legitimate maximum of individual or family wealth will probably vary considerably.

Unless the acquisitive talents required to become "wealthy" are associated with philanthropic, charitable and humanitarian traits of character which inspire use of wealth for the common good, there can be little justification for such extremely large family fortunes as have heretofore been permitted to pass from generation to generation, without requirement for productive work on the part of beneficiaries.

Particularly stigmatized, in recent thinking, has been the accumulation of wealth by questionable speculative methods, business or political chicanery and underworld or borderline racketeering such as is sometimes condoned but never approved.

Rumania Decides To 'Come Clean'

SOME IDEA of the exent to which "personal liberty can be infringed upon is gained from a Bucharest item to the effect that, by government edict, everybody in Rumania "must take a bath by Thursday midnight at the latest."

This may be a matter that has been postponed from year to year, or it may merely be a method adopted to distinguish natives from invaders—but, in any event, it should serve to arouse Russians to the seriousness of the situation.

According to a recent estimate there's slightly less than one rat for each person in the United States—but that's a shortage about which there's not likely to be any complaint.

Constance Bennett's recent fourth marriage is another indication of the difficulty of choosing a suitable name for the baby.

It's Mr. Knudsen's idea that "the greatest need today is time"—but some folks seem to think it's time-and-a-half.

Some college professors become unpopular by pretending to know more than the students.

Not Packing Bags

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

HOW," says she, "can you go on writing about justice and truth and decency in the face of that horror overseas? How can you advise people to have faith in a God? Do you suppose if there were a God He'd let helpless women, children and old people be bombed and brave men be massacred by the thousands?

"I admit I had faith once, but this war has wiped it all out. I don't believe in anything now; just go on living from hour to hour."

Sounds familiar, doesn't it? Chances are you've been asking the same questions yourself, feeling the same sick rage and desolation creeping over you. Most of us have. And many's the time I would gladly swap jobs with the village idiot, just to duck the facts I dare not face. Then something will come along.

Take that recent case of the Danish minister to Washington. You remember — concerning Greenland—and Minister Henrik de Kaufmann had been ordered home. Theoretically, that order came from Denmark, but her minister well knew that it was dictated by Nazi hate and greed. It was not healthy to challenge that hate and greed. Those who did were apt to die prompt and unpleasant deaths, even on American soil. A cautious man might save both his face and his hide by speedy obedience and none would censure him.

These thoughts must have rushed swiftly through Henrik de Kaufmann's mind as he read that ominous command and thought of the Power that loomed behind it, monstrous, malignant. Nation after nation had gone down before that Power. What chance had one man?

And then, as swiftly, there must have come another thought. The Nazis could kill his body, yes. But with all their might there were certain things they could not take from a man. His self-respect, for instance. His sense of honor and his love of decency. His courage and his deep, fierce will to serve the country that he loved. These things no man need lose. He could not pierce the blackout of a world. But he could stand firm on himself, despite that blackout.

And so Henrik de Kaufmann raised his face to the waiting reporters and quietly said six of the bravest words any man ever uttered:

"I AM NOT PACKING MY BAGS!"

And that, partner, as I see it, is the one position you and I can take in this nightmare of hate and doubt that's confronting us all.

I don't know the answers. But I still like the ones I've always loved, better than any I've heard from the other side—and I'm going to hang right on to them. I can't see the trail ahead. And it may be that I never shall see it. But there's one thing I can do—I can stick! I can refuse to sell out on myself. I admit I'm no bargain—but such as I am, I'm going to bet on Elsie and what has always made her tick. And no blood-smeared mechanized monster is going to make me cry "Uncle."

I AM NOT PACKING MY BAGS.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Friday, April 29, 1921.

Akronites were disturbed by flood of circulars advocating "proletarian revolution in America."

Charles W. Cassel was among graduates of Hamma Divinity school in Springfield.

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Mark of Zorro," was screen attraction at the Opera House.

Birth report: Daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hout, Ashland road.

Temple band sponsored indoor circus at Schuler's academy.

Sidney L. Palmer was re-elected president of the First Methodist brotherhood at final meeting of the season.

Alexander Boiner, 44, died at his home, 319 East Third street.

FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY

Wednesday, April 29, 1936.

Richland county financial institutions announced that they had loaned $231,000 to Richland county residents during the last four years.

Michael Boleratz, 65, died at his home.

A $30,000 home building program was begun in Woodland.

The 12-A class of Mansfield high school held a swimming meet.

Howard C. Sword, Richland county surveyor, was nominated for presidency of North Central Ohio Engineering association.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On April 29, 1861, the house of delegates in Maryland rejected a resolution to secede from the Union and join the Confederacy. Even though the decision was unsatisfactory to many, the state as a whole favored staying in the Union.

Timely Editorial

One Defense Was Ready.

At this time of crisis there is solid satisfaction in the fact that the great base at Singapore is found ready when needed. The whole empire has cause for congratulation that in the years after the last war, when public opinion turned toward pacifism, collective security and disarmament, the Singapore project was adopted by the British Parliament and steadily, if slowly, brought to completion.

The base was opened just three years ago and the empire east of Suez has especial reason to be grateful to those in London who since 1923 possessed the foresight and the courage to breast waves of popular opinion in proceeding with the work.

New Zealand can feel proud that she reinforced the project by promising a contribution of one million pounds and by keeping up her installments in good years and bad. Now everyone can appreciate the wisdom of that policy and reap a reward in the added security afforded by the strong defensive bastion of Singapore.—Auckland, New Zealand, News.

This Is Ohio

THE first industrial school on the American continent was started among the Wyandot Indians by the Rev. James B. Finley, who came to the Upper Sandusky mission in 1821.

His first work was the building of a log mission and school house where Indian girls were taught to cook, bake and sew. Outside, in field, at anvil, and at bench, the young braves learned the trades of civilization. In 1824, Bishop Joshua Soule of the Methodist Episcopal church visited the mission on the west side of the Sandusky river, one mile below Upper Sandusky. He found 60 acres of corn growing, a crop of wheat, oats and flax just hasvested, and 10 cows in the pasture.

Industrial training also was popular among the adult Indians. They would visit the mission school and imitate its methods in agriculture, building and buttermaking.

Hints on Etiquette.

Few British Troops Aided Greece With Big Army Idle In England

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Biggest question mark along Wall Street these days is: "Will the British hold out?"

Accustomed to selling short when disaster seems just around the corner, Wall Street views the fate of England as a cold-blooded investment in the future. And judging by the bungling of certain British leaders, Wall Street pessimism would appear to be justified.

Inside information is that General Wavell sent only two divisions of Australian-New Zealand troops to Greece—a total of about 20,000 men. In addition he had one English army service corps, which is for supplies, repairs, hospitalization, etc., for troops in the field. Total, with RAF fliers, ground crews: not more than 50,000 men.

This force was pitted against at least 300,000 well-trained Nazis; nearer 500,000 counting reserves in Bulgaria.

It is true that the British could not spare any more Anzacs from North Africa, but there were 2,000,000 men under arms in the British Isles. That the British lacked planes and tanks was not their fault, but the failure to send men from England is inexplicable; for 2,000,000 men simply fall over each other in defending a small area like the British Isles.

These are errors which may not be cleared up until Churchill and General Wavell write their memoirs. Meanwhile there is one favorable factor, on which Wall Street does not usually reckon, namely the human factor—stamina, nerve, or to use a good old English word, guts.

Significant illustration is the British embassy in Washington. Badly in need of English clerks, the embassy canont keep its subjects from going back to England. Women stenographers, clerks don't want to remain here. They want to go back to fight and die in their homeland. If England is going to fall they want to fall with it.

The days of fighting with bare fists and pitch-forks are over. Nevertheless there is something about this bulldog determination which may win out in the end. After all, it is the same spirit which led to the conquest of America.

Territorial Bases.

THE island bases of the United States are now considered our best safeguard against invasion. But the army and navy brasshats will get a scorching rebuke in a report soon to be made public by the house appropriations subcommittee that inspected territorial bases.

Written by Representative James G. Scrugham of Nevada, chairman of the group, the report will vigorously recommend the immediate creation of an "independent air force." This would be intended to correct two chief abuses:

(1) The location of army and navy bases almost side by side in flat, unprotected country, thus "inviting destruction by enemy bombs." (2) Failure to build hangars, repair shops and other facilities underground.

Regarding the first criticism the Scrugham report will state: "This policy of concentrating highly essential military or industrial structures in very limited areas cannot be too strongly condemned, and may constitute an error of gravest consequences. This is as true in our territorial as well as our continental defenses.

"The lesson of the destruction of the Polish air forces by the Germans at the beginning of the war seems to have gone entirely unheeded (by the aeronautic bureau chiefs responsible). In a flat country, protected air facilities may be impractical, but where there are adjacent hills, it seems inexcusable to deliberately build . . . bases invitingly located for bombing attacks, and so close together that an enemy plane can hit one if it misses the other.

"Everywhere the story is the same, from Hawaii to Puerto Rico, from Alaska to the Virgin Islands, Jamaica and Trinidad. Also, no adequate plans have been formulated for water reserves, except to contract for drilling a few wells, with grave uncertainties as to quality and quantities."

Scrugham's conclusions will be that a "tragedy of the first magnitude" may develop unless immediate steps are taken to rectify conditions at the territorial bases. His solution is the centralization of all military air forces under a single head with cabinet rank.

Bathing Rum.

THE lack of water at the bases was brought home forcibly to the committee when visiting the Virgin Islands.

First request of the group was to be ushered to the nearest shower baths. "Sorry," apologized the welcoming officer, "but our showers aren't in operation. You see, there is an acute water shortage here."

He pointed to several natives plodding by with five-gallon jugs of water balanced on their heads.

"That's drinking water," he explained. "They get it at a spring five miles from here. We catch our water for bathing in cisterns, but it hasn't rained here for so long that we've run out."

"Well, what do you do about bathing?" asked Scrugham.

"We bathe in rum," was the cheerful reply. "We buy what we call 'bathing rum' for 25 cents a gallon at the general store in town."

Note — Drinking water is a problem on many West Indian islands, and is caught by huge concrete "catchments" which cover the hills and divert every drop of rain into cisterns.

CIO Mediation Subs.

THE president has been under considerable public criticism for appointing CIO leaders to the National Defense Mediation board. But the public doesn't know the half of it.

Real fact is that CIO members Phil Murray and Thomas Kennedy have been sending in unauthorized substitutes to act for them on the board. Except for the first meeting, when they sat for their pictures, Murray and Kennedy have been conspicuous by their absence.

Anticipating this, the president, when he set up the board, designated an alternate for each of the eleven members. The CIO alternates were Emil Rieve, head of the textile workers, and Clinton Golden, regional director of the steel workers organizing committee. If these two always filled in for Murray and Kennedy, there would be no complaint.

But more often than not, Murray designates pinch-hitters who, technically, have no right to sit on the board. Among them have been Allen Haywood, CIO organization director; Anthony Smith, CIO assistant counsel; and John Brophy, director of industrial union councils.

What particularly gripes the board members is that Haywood was originally proposed by Murray as a substitute and Roosevelt rejected him. When the president asked for recommendations, Murray sent in his own name at the instigation of John L. Lewis.

Note—Inside word in the Defense Mediation board is that the next time Haywood, close henchman of Lewis, shows up his right to sit will be challenged.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The late Sidney Howard was a big, friendly, blond-headed, resolute, forthright sort of character who loathed pussy-footers and who believed in giving you the shirt off his back if you deserved it.

When he met a tragic death on a farm a few years ago his great and good friend Robert E. Sherwood and other members of the Playwrights Company created a Sidney Howard fund, to be given annually to some deserving, needy young playwright.

Last season this award, which amounts to $1,500, went to Robert Ardrey, but this year it has been turned over to the Authors League Fund with provision that it be used to aid deserving young dramatists.

I well recall the day Howard arrived in a blue funk at Grand Central Station after "It Can't Happen Here" had been barred from the screen by the Hays office. There had been a protest from Italy, and the Hays office decided that the story was to be junked. Howard had been on the coast dramatizing the Sinclair Lewis novel for the screen. When he heard that it had been called off he hurried to New York, and the "quotes" he gave the reporters who met him at the train sizzled the Broadway columns for days.

Howard, though he wrote a number of original dramas, is best remembered for his dramatizations of novels. He dramatized "Dodsworth" from the Sinclair Lewis novel, and he wrote the screen adaptation of "Gone With the Wind." Shortly after this he figured in that tragic episode that left Broadway so bewildered and stunned. On a rural retreat, kicking about a farm, he was crushed against a barn wall by a five ton tractor. He never knew what hit him.

OLD BARNEY GALLANT, the Greenwich Village sage, has taken time out from his inn-keeping to write his memoirs. They will appear serially in Cosmopolitan magazine under the title "My Past Pursues Me." The time he took "off," he says, was between 4 a. m., which is closing time, and seven a. m., which is his breakfast time. Under this arrangement he completed the task in just one year.

MILK-FED chicken is not an innovation but at La Cava's they tell you it is different. "Ah," they say, "milk—yes; but not just plain milk. All our chickens are fed on goat's milk."

The air cooling systems are creeping into the theaters and restaurants. . . . The sidewalk cafes with their colored awnings are opening up. . . . And George M. Cohan is to be observed daily in a box at Yankee stadium, surest of all signs that summer is with us.

The boys had a lot of fun with Carl Sandburg on his first round of New York nightclubs. . . . The biographer of Lincoln received more attention than any celebrity since George VI was in town. His straight silver locks and black bow tie stood out in the ringside glow like a steel engraving.

New York has had Russian, Hawaiian, Spanish, French, and Hungarian nightclubs, but now it has its first opportunity to glimpse an all-Chinese club—the Forbidden City, operated by Bill Poy Lee of Chinatown, New York, N. Y. It's in East 58th street—a long way from Pell and Mott thoroughfares of the Chinese quarter. The entertainment runs to mystic exhibitions and Chinese dances as performed by Miss Hoo Shee to crooners of exotic Oriental melodies. P. S. The chef is a Hindu.

There is an ancient piccolo player in the Village who shuffles around in rags carrying four or five piccolos sticking out of his pockets. He pauses on street corners and, after playing a few tunes, passes the hat. He has long straggly grey hair reaching almost to his shoulders.

A Farmer's Diary

Young Fishermen

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

AND now that spring has come, it is grand to live on Honey Creek! Peach trees are pink with bloom; moist red apple buds are beautiful in contrast with the tender leaves; white petals of juniper give fresh life and beauty to the wooded hills. Wheat fields wave in the warm south wind. The swamp yields a frog concert every night, and during the day red-winged blackbird, peewee and meadow lark feed there and sing and build their nests.

Often, after school, our two boys—ten and six—take up their handmade fishing poles that hang on the sagging wire fence, put them over their respective shoulders and march south across the soft green fields, to Honey Creek. One carries the rusty can of worms, both are in threadbare shirts and rolled up pantaleons—and I hear their voices faintly as they travel farther southward.

Bluets are in the grass beyond the old rail fence. The pasture is like a park. Here the creek loops back and forth between vivid sod banks and great elm trees arch along the farther bank. Beneath these elms, in a deep hole by a root, the fishermen throw in their lines. A robin in a thorn apple tree beside the swampy meadow edge begins to sing his evening song. Buttercups grow in vivid yellow clusters and the smaller boy, tired of fishing, fills his arms with them.

When the large red sun has set, and dusky twilight begins to fall, two tired fishers trek home along the edge of the plowed ground. The smaller carries both poles with the wet lines wound spirally around, while the older boy has a gallon pail which he shifts from one hand to the other frequently. The smaller brother hangs the poles on the fence and comes running up, where his mother and I are working. "Mom, we were fishing on the bank and all at once something called out from the water in a big coarse voice, 'Butler rum. Butler rum!' The hair on both our heads felt funny and we moved on down the creek. We caught all these fish there in the bucket. They're all alive and swimmin'. If you say they're too little to fry, we can put them into the pond . . . But the biggest one—and he held his little hands apart nearly 18 inches—got away, just as we had him hooked and pulled out and all. He hit the bank and bounced!"

STALIN WON'T HELP ALLIES, SPEAKER SAYS

the democracies that Russia might help them is part of a deliberate policy of confusion. It is a psychological war of nerves that is reaching to every part of the world," Lyons asserted.

With hundreds of German engineers at work in Russia, keeping a watch over military and industrial developments, Hitler has no illusions about Russia's military and industrial forces, but he respects its propaganda machine, Lyons told the audience.

"That propaganda helped to tear down France and now it is busy in England and Latin America," he added. "In Latin American countries the Communists are teaching hatred of the Yankees to interfere with hemisphere unity and insert a wedge on this side of the ocean."

Lyons said he saw little chance that Hitler will fight Russia unless he fails to whip Great Britain and is "forced to turn against Russia to save his face."

If that happens, Hitler would take the course of Napoleon when he attacked Russia after his unsuccessful battle against England, he said.

"An illusion persists that the revolution against the Czar in Russia in 1917 brought about a better society, but Russia has changed much since then, and the enigma is in our minds and not in Russia," Lyons said.

"The cultural fronts in Russia that deceived the rest of the world after the revolution have been reversed and now there is a great raction against innovations and a social and economic reversal."

Stalin, who Lyons described as a worse dictator than any czar, has conducted a blood purge against Communist leaders in the past four or five years, making Russia an unhealthy place for Communists.

Lyons said from fifty to a hundred thousand Communists have been executed in the purge in a behind-the-scenes civil war that resulted from Stalin's move to change the order in Russia.

If Hitler succeeds in building his new world order—and Lyons predicted he won't—he can use Russia and Japan as policemen to help him keep Asia and the Pacific in line, Lyons continued.

He said the attack on Finland proved that Russia's military machine has numbers but it is an empty shell with no national morale to back it up.

In a question period following his talk, Lyons said the destinies of the United States are bound closely to the other democracies of the world and it is to our interests to help England defeat Hitler and Stalin and all they stand for.

Answering another question, he said the industrialism of Russia has taken millions of lives with countless people starving to death and thousands dying by the hands of executioners as the new order was put into effect.

Replying to another query, Lyons said he saw little hope of the countries Hitler has conquered revolting against him unless they can get the German armies to revolt with them.

"If Hitler is defeated, that may occur, but as long as he wins, the power of his mechanized forces will quell any attempted revolts among workers," Lyons asserted.

First American correspondent to interview Stalin, Lyons told the audience he found the Soviet dictator a "simple, pleasant, and slightly shy man" who talked to Lyons about his two children who were in school. "It was hard to believe that he could give orders that meant death to thousands," he added.

Unlike Hitler and Mussolini who are able speakers and can sway crowds. Stalin is uneducated and the retiring type who prefers to work quietly and away from public view, Lyons said.

Atty. William F. Black, representing the University club, was chairman of the meeting and introduced Lyons.

'BEER BARREL POLKA' LEADS IN WAR'S PARADE OF SONG HITS

LONDON—(UP)—Biggest song hit of this war is the "Beer Barrel Polka."

Canadian soldiers sang it when they debarked in England. Australian and New Zealand soldiers sang it when they filed down the gangplank in the Middle East. English soldiers sang it as they trudged through the mud of France. And shelter-dwellers in London sing it while the bombs whistle down about them.

So far it has sold nearly a million copies—and it's still a good seller.

Running a close second on England's "hit parade" is the American best-seller, "South of the Border," which, incidentally, was written by England's best known song-writing team, Jimmy Kennedy and Michael Carr. That, too, has sold nearly a half million copies.

Third place probably goes to "Wish Me Luck as You Wave Me Good-Bye," with which Gracie Fields, the English comedienne now in the United States, sang her way into the hearts of the British army, navy and air force. Some 450,000 copies have been sold.

Carr, working alone, wrote the song that is in fourth place, "Somewhere in France," whose popularity waned after the British retreat to Dunkirk. It sold 400,000 copies.

But none of the songs of this war approaches the sales of England's hits of the World war. For instance, "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," sold 5,000,000 copies, "Roses of Picardy," 3,000,000, and "Keep the Home Fires Burning," more than 1,000,000 copies.

Publishers attribute the drop in sales of hit songs to the radio, on which a popular song today is literally "played to death" in about 13 weeks, whereas during the last war the average life of a hit song was two years.

Milk Mixtures For Stomach Ulcers

A recent medical discovery now being used by doctors and hospitals everywhere has proven unusually successful in the treatment of stomach ulcers caused from excess acid. It is a harmless preparation yet so effective that in many cases the pains of stomach ulcers disappear almost immediately after it is used. Also recommended for gas pains, indigestion and heartburn due to hyperacidity. Sufferers may now try this at home by obtaining a bottle of Lurin from their druggist. Lurin contains this new discovery in its purest form. Easy to take. Just mix two teaspoonfuls in a half glass of milk. Costs but little and sold under an absolute guarantee that it must satisfy or money refunded. Lurin for sale by Weinberger's and drug stores everywhere.

Black and white spring version. Peggy Moran, movie actress, chooses a black-veiled white felt hat to set off her black and white print dress. Tiny Baby Needs More Attention

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

A young mother writes:

"My oldest boy is 19 months old and for some reason he has gotten completely out of control. The least request brings on a tirade. Up until a few months ago he was exceptionally obedient. I have spanked, talked and begged, all to no avail. He stiffens his legs, and of all the grunting and fits any one ever saw, he has it. It can't be jealousy over a younger brother because I show no difference in them and besides Billie, the baby, is no trouble. Jimmie, the older boy, dearly loves his baby brother. He always begs to hug him if the baby is awake which wish I always grant no matter what I may be doing."

Doctor's Answer.

I am sure you are a patient mother and try to show Jimmie as much consideration as the baby. But the tiny baby needs more of your time and attention This is Jimmie's loss and he cannot quite understand. Jimmie gains attention by hugging Billie. But if you really knew, Jimmie often wishes there were no Billie Naturally you tell your friends how good Billie is. This word good Jimmie interprets as different from your meaning, and suggests that Jimmie, in contrast, is bad. Just because Jimmie often gets punished, he must believe you love him less than Billie

Praise Good Behavior.

Now you cannot condone Jimmie's badness, but you can ignore much of it, and find ways to punish and command him less When he gets the tantrum you speak of, act as if you had no more feeling than a fence rail Should he kick or strike you, give him a spanking. Otherwise do nothing, say nothing.

Praise Jimmie more when he is good. You and Dad should read to him from pictured story books, and go walking or playing with him when he is generally out of sorts.

You say he will get these "fits" when you make a request, which must mean that you treat all requests as commands. But you should not, you don't with adults When you make a request, give him the privilege of choosing Then on no occasion punish him, since you have made no command Don't tell Jimmie to come here go there, or do this ask him Then use persuasion; but if he fails to accede, drop the matter, don't try to force him. This will increase his stubbornness. But when you say NO or Don't (being very sure you should) he must stop at once or receive instant physical pain. Borrow my book, "The Modern Parent" from your public library, and read the chapters on stubbornness, jealousy, and punishment.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. Is it wise to correct the child's grammar at home?

A. It is not, as a rule. If his parents use accurate grammar the child wishing to seem grown up will emulate them If the parents employ inaccurate grammar their correction of the child will only annoy and confuse him. Occasionally, however, when the parent-child relationship is very companionable, a quiet suggestion in regard to a certain form of expression might be effective. The same applies to manners.

Coiffures This Year Are Most Becoming Yet

Hats aren't quite as crazy as they have been, but they're still a bit queer in the head, if you know what I mean. You can find something decent to plank on your dome, and that couldn't be said this time last year. Coiffures were never saner. They are piquant, designed with high art and can be completely described only by that sweet old-fashioned word "lady-like." While they're youthful—most of them—there's no nonsense about them. Taking them by and large, fore and aft, they're about the most satisfactory hairdos the sisters have ever flaunted. And that's saying something, since every year during the last decade has brought forth smart and becoming ones.

The long bob with ringleted ends and side parting, swept straight back of the ears, seems a favorite with many of the beauties of stage and screen. It takes a pretty face to get away with it, but pretty faces are everywhere these days. It requires little management. It stays put. A permanent occasionally, plenty of brushing, the weekly shampoo and the hair problem is solved. Easy

Longer hair means less frequent curling, and longer hair is necessary for rolls. You put your top and side rolls where you please, to suit the contour of the face. You fasten them with pins or use tuck combs or, if your little heart desires, you tie the largest top roll with a ribbon, which looks pretty, adds a touch of youthful gaiety.

The clean-cut, swept-away-from-the-face mode still hangs on. If you want to appreciate the beauty of this style, look at photographs of the dear girls of the past with wind-blowns or, even further back, those with hair drawn out over the cheeks or pulled down over the forehead In those days it was a combination of all hair and not much face, which certainly was not flattering to pretty eyes and well-chiseled noses.

Ears stay out, and this seems to be as good time as any to remind you that if you tint your cheeks and chin with rouge you should include the ear lobes. When a natural blush appears—they're pretty rare these days—and a darling sight—the ear lobes take on the modest wild-rose coloring.

Getting back to the coiffure: the effect must be soft and natural, but neat as wax. Hair must glitter like the raven's wing. So have your atomizer filled with brilliantine. Apply your glitter before the tresses are arranged so that the comb will sweep the brilliantine the length of the hair shafts.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Dicky's voice was like a challenge, and I answered it with instant reaction from my cowardly inertia of the moment before.

"I'm all ready," I said "Just tell me what you want done."

"That's my own girl," he said. "First, be sure your nerves and fingers are steady."

"They are." I assured him, and told the truth.

"Then take this man's revolver and flashlight away from him. Don't put them in this seat. Lean over the back of the next one, and put them down on that Loosen your grip on those things," he commanded the gangster, "but don't you dare drop them Mrs Graham will take them from you"

I took the flashlight and the pistol from his hands, and put them where Dicky had indicated Then I turned back to face him.

"Come over here," my husband directed, "and put your fingers on this pistol I'm holding to this bird's head. I won't let go of it until you have a firm grip on it, and don't have any qualms about using it, if this baby gets fractious. And don't you get any fool ideas about making a break"—he addressed the gangster directly. "My wife is a crack shot, only she doesn't like to hurt anybody. But if she saw you trying any funny business with me, you'd never know what happened to you. She's queer that way, so you'd better watch your step."

"I know when I'm up against it," the gangster mumbled. "But I'll—"

"Save your breath," Dicky advised curtly. "You're going to need it in a long walk you're taking presently. Got that pistol firmly in your mitt, Madge?"

A Walking Arsenal.

"Yes," I answered steadily.

"Then keep it trained against his ear," my husband commanded. "I'm going to frisk the laddie."

He went over the gangster with practiced hands, and in a few minutes had quite an arsenal on the seat behind him where I had put the other revolver and the flashlight.

"We'll unload them afterward," he said, cheerily, "when we have more time. I guess that's all for his custom made suit. Now we'll tackle his shoes."

"No!" the gangster exploded.

"Oh! sorry! but 'yes,' " Dicky retorted mockingly. Put one foot at a time on my knee, please."

For a long second the eyes of the two men met and measured. Then almost as if hypnotized, the gangster lifted one foot to Dicky's knee, and my husband rapidly took off the shoe, taking from it two small but exceedingly sharp knives. Then he took off and examined the other shoe, taking out one knife. Last of all he narrowly examined the inner soles and gave a little chuckle of satisfaction at something he found in one of them.

"I thought as much," he declared triumphantly, drawing out a piece of folded thin paper, and putting it in his own pocket. "You never learn, do you, big boy?" He addressed the gangster jeeringly. "That false inner shoe lining is completely outmoded"

Code Message.

"Much good that paper will do you," he said thickly.

"I suppose you mean that it is in code," Dicky retorted cheerily. "That will be child's play to somebody I know."

His eyes glanced obliquely at me with a dancing light in them, then returned to the man he was bedeviling—with some set purpose, I knew, beneath his levity.

"And now," he said, "we'll have a look at your wallet"

He took the case from the man's inner pocket, an ornate thing, of costly leather, flipped out its contents, money and papers, and transfered them all to his own pockets.

"You won't need any driver's license where you're going," he told the man.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, April 30.

The astral intervention on the affairs of this day may manifest in surprising opportunities for increasing profits or cashing in on bold strokes in a new direction by the decisive application of initiative, force and daring to be original in idea and method, backed up by hard work and sound purpose. There may be opposition or treachery to cope with, but with wariness, sagacity and a normal ability to yield in a tight place there should be much gained. In personal affairs there may be similar tactics successfully applied.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a year of large opportunities for growth and expansion in a big way and this arising in unexpected manner or through the development of new, bold and constructive methods of doing old as well as new things in an improved way. This may require initiative and audacity and is likely to provoke opposition or hostility of an open as well as subtle way. But vigilance, well organized plants, sound sense and proper ability to manipulate trickery as well as antagonism, may avert a menace also besetting private associations.

A child born on this day should have great constructive ability, being perhaps bold and original to the point of genius. This may attract antagonism and duplicity, with reactions on its inner life and emotions.

"The Authority on Authorities"

LOOK FOR A SURE THING

AS YOU study a hand after the opening lead, you may see a likely way to make your contract, a method in which the probabilities favor your success. Finding such a course is not necessarily the signal to begin play according to that plan. Take at least one more look to see if there is some absolutely certain way to your goal, or one which is almost so If there is, then forget about the one which involved a bit of risk, and go for the sounder method.

Most of the North-South pairs which played this deal in New York's Inter-Club Contract league got into the spade grand slam contract, including those which did not use the Blackwood convention in the way that Clarence L. Mortimer and Henry C. Meyer III did as recorded above. None of them made the slam, however, except Mr Mortimer.

All other declarers, after the club K was led to the Dummy's A, took two rounds of trumps and then tried to set up diamonds by ruffing up the suit, in order to discard the second losing heart. This would have worked if the missing six hearts had been divided with three to each defender, or four in one hand and the doubleton king in the other. When that proved not to be the case, they were set.

Mr Mortimer, however, guarded himself against the terrible break of the suit which did develop, with five in one hand. To do that, he needed every re-entry the dummy possessed. So he went to work on the diamonds immediately after winning the first trick, on which he parked the heart 2 He laid down the diamond A, ruffed the 3 with the spade 8, led the spade 3 to the K ruffed the diamond 5 with the spade 9, led the spade 4 to the 7, ruffed the diamond 9 with the spade 10, led to the heart A, ruffed the diamond 10 with the spade J, led to the heart K, and then scored the now set-up diamond Q discarding the heart 10 on it. The spade A and Q accounted for the last two tricks.

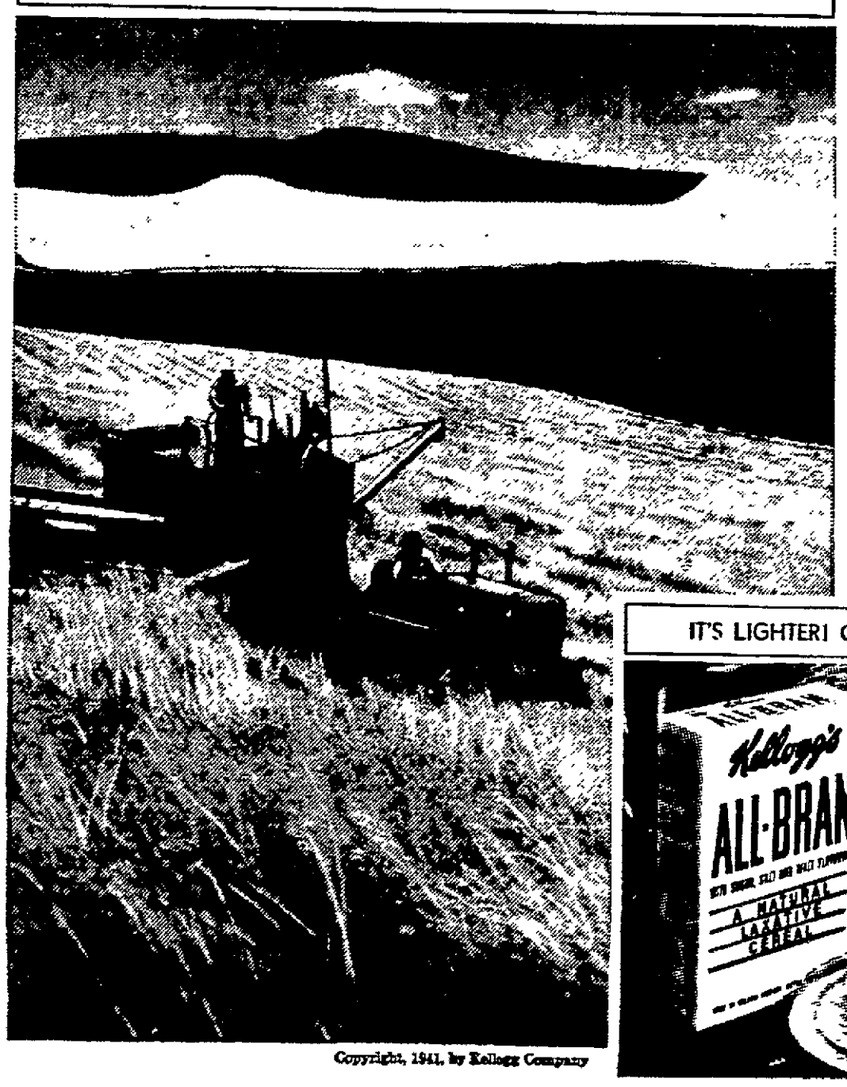
IT'S IMPROVED! DOUBLY DELICIOUS!
"GOLDEN SOFT" KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN
NOW MADE FROM A SPECIAL WHEAT!
MADE FROM ONE OF THE WORLD'S SOFTEST WHEATS



LOOK WHAT'S HAPPENED TO KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN—the natural laxative cereal that a million people eat every day.

NOW IT'S DOUBLY DELICIOUS! It is made of finer quality bran from one of the world's softest wheats. The improved ALL-BRAN is golden-bright—and so light and crisp!

Americans expect a good product to keep on getting better through the years. That's why Kellogg's grain buyers have been seeking a wheat that would add new goodness to KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN.

A few months ago, they found it growing in the sunny valleys of the Pacific Coast states, and in a few midwestern and eastern areas. Put through ALL-BRAN'S toasting ovens, the bran from this wheat came out bright as gold—and lighter, crisper, more delicately flavored than any we had used in 20 years.

And now the improved ALL-BRAN is at your grocer's. Eat it every day and drink plenty of water. ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. It is sold by grocers and served in restaurants everywhere.

IT'S LIGHTER! CRISPER! TRY IT TOMORROW!

CHAPTER V

"Yes, Miss Stone, I would mind leaving you—very much," Anderson said, "I rather like talking to you—seeing what makes you tick. I take it you satisfy any whim that strikes you, anyway — no matter what the cost—or inconvenience to other people. Like breaking that window, for instance. That reminds me—I hope it doesn't decide to rain tonight." Bill Anderson sounded anxious.

He squinted up at the darkening sky. Ugly black clouds moved swiftly across the moon, then abruptly blotted it out.

"How unbearable if you had to escort a little reprobate like me through a downpour!" Raye said sarcastically, flinging a half-eaten pickle over her shoulder.

"I really wouldn't mind. You see, I haven't had that glass put in my office window yet—stock will probably get soaked if it rains."

"How careless of you, Mr. Anderson! I should think you'd take better care of your stock."

"Had to make a few collections before I could afford to buy glass," he told her curtly.

"You mean—you're trying to tell me you didn't have the money until—until I gave you that check?"

"That's right. Now if everything is ruined . . ."

"It will be my fault?"

"Let your conscience be your guide. Anyway, the glass is out and who's to blame for it is beside the point."

She bounced to her feet, venison and an ear of corn sliding off her plate into the hay.

"I'd like you to know, Mr. Anderson, I'll not bother you further tonight—or any other time! I have a—a way to get home—without your kind assistance. Good night!"

She tossed her wooden plate away and flounced from him, her head high.

But she heard no protest from him, neither did he attempt to follow her, and she had an uncomfortable feeling that he might be laughing at her.

At any rate, he was no one she cared to know. She hated men who set her on edge. Why, he wasn't even polite enough to keep his thoughts — his disagreeable critical thoughts—to himself!

Soon she was playing a game of ball with a crowd of rollicking guests; outwardly as gay as a lark, she was merely trying to fight off her recent pout over the maddeningly frank Bill Anderson.

But her ball repeatedly refused to bounce against the target set up in a cornfield, and she missed the mark so many times that she was declared loser and forced to pitch hay as a forfeit.

She went from this into a wild crack-the-whip dance, and ended up laughing and panting on a soft mound of hay.

Strong arms quickly lifted her to her feet.

She brushed dust from her eyes, and burst out, in astonishment, "Oh—it's you!"

"Yes, Miss Stone." It was Bill Anderson. "I'm generally around when needed."

He held a broad capable palm in the air. "It's beginning to sprinkle. If you're ready to leave, I'll be glad to take you home."

"But I told you . . ."

She paused. She continued impulsively, "On second thought Mr. Anderson, I believe it would interest me to accept your magnanimous offer. In fact—it might interest both of us."

"I'm sure of it." The wilting sarcasm in his voice was equal to hers.

They began walking toward the improvised dressing rooms in the harness end of the huge barn. She was trying to conjure up a retort sharp enough to jar him violently, but for once in her life she was stumped. However, an opportunity would come along eventually, she assured herself stubbornly. She'd never yet met the man who couldn't be brought to her feet. And before she was through with this know-it-all, he would change his tune. Why, he treated her as if she were a thoroughly spoiled child who needed disciplining! Even Aunt Susan had no luck at that!

And whenever Mawson Duke, her attorney, advised financial restraint, she always laughed at him—and went on being a spendthrift. She did as she pleased. In fact, no one since her 18th birthday had told here, with any degree of success, what she should or shouldn't do.

Now and then she wondered what it would be like not to have income enough to make ends meet—like some of the weary-looking shop-girls with ready-made smiles on their meticulously made-up faces.

Then she as quickly forgot it, never dreamed of doing anything to ease their lot, and went thoughtlessly on her way, irritated by such things as proposals of marriage, dress fittings and guest lists. Irritated by trying to decide whether it would be more fun to remain in Wilville or follow her set to Miami or New York or Sun Valley, or travel aimlessly in South America and meet thrilling new people—it was aggravating that people in Europe had to litter up everything with bombs and prevent traveling there.

Now, of course, she had to hang around Wilville to bring her unsatisfactory affair with Hal Bedford to some sort of happy adjustment—unless Ruthie dragged him off with the twins to some cool summer resort. But in that case, it certainly would be too obvious if Raye Stone followed them. She certainly would never do that.

Bill Anderson's shabby old convertible coupe was too noisy even to allow trivial conversation. It went gayly careening through the rain, the leaky top now and then allowing huge drops to splash on Raye.

But strange to say, she was enjoying every second of this novel experience. She couldn't remember ever having ridden in anything but long powerful automobiles that purred sweetly along the roughest of roads with swift arrogance. No other man had ever given her any such ride as this.

And as yet this odd man had offered her no apology. Why, he even acted as if, in allowing her to ride in this comical little car, he was conferring a favor upon her!

A great fork of lightning slithered across the sky like a flaming reptile. Clouds pounded together with an ear-splitting roar. A sudden gust of wind sent a rivulet through the crack in the closed windshield, soaking Raye's thin satin slippers and sending a chill through her whole being.

But Bill Anderson only remarked indifferently, "This jolopy leaks in every joint. It will give you a fine shower bath. But you're neither sugar nor salt, Miss Stone."

"You mean I need taking down a peg, I suppose. Well- just to be contrary, I'll say I don't mind being splashed from head to foot. It's a decided—novelty."

"I thought it would be. I knew I could count on this ride giving you a big thrill."

He laughed and it was contagious. Raye wanted to join in, but she checked herself resolutely.

* * *

He made an abrupt turn and the car rushed along a road which led in the opposite direction from her home.

"Where are you going?" she demanded quickly.

"To my gas station. Got to stuff up that window—or I'll owe the company a pretty penny for rain-soaked accessories."

"Oh. But my aunt will be furious if I'm not in soon—if you're interested."

Raye was positive that her aunt had been asleep for hours. Poor strait-laced Aunt Susan who long since had ceased to make any protest about her niece's unpredictable activities!

"If I'm interested? You flatter me. However—you're at liberty to phone your aunt. I'll let you use the phone this time."

Raye felt rather than saw his head turn momentarily in her direction. She was sure that his strongly chiseled face held an irritating grin and she was glad it was too dark to meet it.

"You're all sweetness and light, aren't you?" she countered, a little savagely. "I shall be delighted to use that phone. I can't believe it really works."

"It probably wouldn't—if my firm didn't pay the bill."

She shook her head at his unparalleled frankness.

A slight thread of pity for him began running through her, but she shoved it firmly into the back of her mind. A man so purely caustic deserved whatever troublesome handout life allotted him, she thought indignantly.

He soon stopped the car in front of the dark gas station. He jumped out, ran around to her side of the car and opened the door.

"Your hard luck, Miss Stone," he said quickly, "but I'll have to carry you in. The drive's full of puddles."

"I don't mind puddles," she told him defiantly.

She started to step out and his arms went swiftly around her.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Tales From Times Square.

WILL BRADLEY is telling the silly legend of the two Aquarium fish who were discussing their proposed transfer to the Bronx.

"How do you suppose Commissioner Moses will get us up there?" asked the first sardine.

"Probably by subway," decided the second.

"My gosh," moaned the first sardine. "They'll pack us in—like passengers!"

One of those society lads best identified by their air of disdainful boredom was the object of a few digs at El Morocco the other evening.

"He's unbearably aloof," one girl said.

"But very polite," opined the other.' "His nose gets up every time a lady enters the room."

* * *

A famous Broadway heel — a handsome fellow who is detested by most of the beauties around town because he's such a wolf—strolled into the Cloop and was given an ogling by one and all.

"He," murmured an envious lad, referring to the heel's good looks, "must be the kind of fellow women go for."

"Yes," cracked Jack Durant, "with knives!"

* * *

A debutante who has been so snooty that most of her boy friends have walked out on her was lounging in Armando's with her usual haughty attitude.

"Look at her," whispered Ann Graham. "She's putting on all the airs the fellows gave her!"

Ozzie Nelson tells the story of the time Jack Benny invited a group of movie celebrities over to his house for a party. It was a foggy night during one of the rainy spells.

"What a night for a soiree," one of the guests complained as he groped his way through the thick fog. "Why, it's ceiling zero."

"Maybe that's why Benny's holding the party tonight," giggled a second guest. "So he can tell us the sky's the limit!"

* * *

Lou Holtz was at Lum Fong's discussing a cordially disliked local politician, and one of the crowd, who didn't know the fellow, asked Holtz to describe him.

"He's this kind of a guy," explained Holtz. "If he's battling the flu—everybody roots for the germs!"

* * *

A very famous gent was in the Beachcomber last night trying to impress the model he was with by telling her how important he was.

"Look at him," said Georgie Hale, who had overheard. "He's trying to trade his paragraph in Who's Who for one in her diary!"

Bobby Day relays the fable of the hillbilly, who'd never worn anything but overalls in his life, who was suddenly drafted into the army. The quartermaster issued him full regalia, and one of his fellow soldiers, realizing the hillbilly didn't know how to get into the uniform, helped him.

He put on the rookie's shoes and tied the laces for him; then he put on his shirt, buttoned it, tied the regulation tie around the lad's neck and left him.

The hillbilly stood motionless in the center of his tent for 15 minutes. Until finally one of his fellow-rookies asked him why he didn't move around and look the camp over.

"Cain't," replied the Tennessean. "I'm all tied up."

Charlie Stark, who reports the movie news, is telling the one about a silent picture star who was visiting the zoo with her two children. She noticed that a boy was following them about, and even in the menagerie he seemed to find her more interesting than the monkeys.

Finally he gathered up all his courage, approached the ex-star and asked:

"Pardon me, lady, but aren't you So-and-so?"

The actress, extremely flattered, beamed and began readying her wrist to sign the first autograph in years, when the urchin exclaimed triumphantly:

"Boy, oh boy! . . . What a memory I've got!"

AWAIT NAMING OF ADJUTANT TO SET UP GUARD

Bricker Disclaims 'Selection' of Personnel; Location of Units Held O. K.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Structure of Ohio's state guard—created and dissolved within a single day because of an official "misunderstanding"—will be set up after a new adjutant general has been appointed, Governor Bricker said today.

A state guard plan, including appointments of top officers, had been announced by Acting Adjutant General Roland B. Lee coincident with the signing of the Hunter Guard bill yesterday by the governor.

Lee had given reporters the information in advance. He said the plan had been approved by the governor and that its details could be published after the Hunter bill had been signed.

Several hours later Lee told reporters to refrain from using the name of the announced commanding officer of the guard brigade. He said he had "misunderstood" the governor in announcing Col. Robert Haubrich, Columbus, as brigade commander.

Still later Bricker disclaimed any responsibility for the entire guard plan and "appointed" personnel.

"No authority was given to anybody to give out any plan, or name any officers or personnel," Bricker said at a press conference. "We had gone thoroughly into the setup, but the personnel was not definitely decided upon. An adjutant general and commanding officer will be appointed first before any decision is made."

The governor said, however, that Lee's statement that there would be 2,000 men and about 140 officers in the guard was correct.

The announced structure of the guard—two infantry regiments a medical and a quartermaster battalions—was also "substantially correct," the governor said, as well as the announced locations of the various units. (One company is to be located in Mansfield.)

Bricker said he "did not know" how Lee came to make the announcement. He said he (Bricker) had not even seen the guard plan.

FUND BILL UP TOMORROW FOR SENATE VOTE

Action of Committee Boosts Total To Record High of $352,000,000.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—An additional $1,000,000 for new buildings and other improvements at five state universities was provided today in the administration's general appropriations bill as the big spending measure was sent to the senate with amendments raising expenditures for 1941-42 to a new record high total of approximately $352,350,000.

Last-minute revisions made by the senate finance committee before recommending the bill's passage provided for total increases of about $477,000 over the amount set up in the measure as approved by the house.

The million-dollar boost for university buildings, a victory for Sen. Grant P. Ward (R-Columbus) in his week-long battle with Chairman Fred L. Adams (R-Bowling Green), was transferred from the state emergency fund.

If the bill is approved by the senate when it comes up for a vote tomorrow, the increase would be distributed as follows:

Ohio State, $540,000; Miami university, $150,000; Ohio university, $150,000; Kent State, $100,000, and Bowling Green State, $60,000 .

In arguing for the increase, which brings the total appropriation for new university buildings to $3,300,000, Ward said the institutions had been neglected for 12 years in the face of steadily growing student enrollments.

Chairman Adams sought in vain for a compromise, pointing out that funds in the emergency appropriation had been earmarked for poor relief purposes for 33 hard-pressed Ohio counties.

"If this increase is voted the universities, the administration's whole relief program will be upset," Adams said. "Even a Democrat shouldn't vote to take poor relief money away from the poor starving miners of Athens county."

Ward assured the committee that the budget would not be unbalanced by the transfer of funds and said increased use and sales tax collections this year, far exceeding the administration's estimates, would provide ample money to meet the state's poor relief needs.

JANITOR'S CASE READY FOR JURY

Prosecutor to Submit Data In Musician's Slaying To Summit Grand Jury.

(By International News Service)

AKRON — Prosecutor Alva J. Russell today prepared evidence he will present tomorrow to the Summit county grand jury in seeking a first degree murder indictment against Albert B. Lukens, 58-year-old North Hills Methodist church janitor, accused of cremating Ruth Zwicker, 24.

Miss Zwicker, a musician, was killed Easter Sunday eve when she refused to kiss Lukens.

She had gone to the church to practice on the piano. According to the story told authorities by Lukens, Miss Zwicker fell against the piano bench while resisting his advances and, his confession related, he shoved her body in the church furnace Easter Sunday morning.

Later, Lukens, who several years ago served a sentence for the slaying of another woman, assisted police in searching the church for Miss Zwicker.

Evidence in the blackjack death of Walter Lamb also will be presented to the jury, Russell said. Lamb was injured fatally in Akron city jail when he was allegedly struck by Patrolmen Jacob Yingling and Richard Coburn. They faces charges of manslaughter.

FIRST LADY UNDER GUARD AS LETTER THREATENS HER LIFE

(By International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD—A letter threatening her life has been received by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the president, it was learned today, and as a result the secret service is taking extra precautions to guard her.

Mrs. Roosevelt was due to depart "for the north" this evening after lecturing in downtown Los Angeles last night.

The president's wife received the threatening letter at the home of Melvin Douglas, the actor, and his wife, Helen Gahagan, where she was a house guest during her Los Angeles stay.

The secret service was immediately notified. It was the first time, it was believed, that Mrs. Roosevelt has ever felt it necessary to invoke such aid.

Secret Service operatives and a special Los Angeles police squadron threw a guard around the Philharmonic auditorium last night as Mrs. Roosevelt spoke, and all persons entering the building were subjected to the closest scrutiny.

Exact contents and the signature of the letter were kept a secret and it was not disclosed whether the letter had been mailed or delivered by messenger to the Douglas house.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — This-modern-pace department: RKO's deal for an "untitled and unwritten" novel by I. A. R. Wylie is equaled only by RKO's deal for the services of an infant, signed before the latter's birth, for "The Devil and Daniel Webster," a film story purchased in the old-fashioned way after it had been written, titled, and published.

ROBBIN COONS

Miss Wylie, having written, published, and sold to the screen a number of other works, doubtless has an edge on the rest of us but the idea still offers interesting possibilities. Why not, for instance, a lit'ry agency devoted solely to peddling screen rights to all the unwritten novels of those millions of Americans who haven't got around to the writing but will some day—say, the day after tomorrow?

RKO's born-to-act baby, now happily born and perhaps already introduced to the camera, is Miss Anita Lee. Little Miss Lee, deemed in advance of her earthly debut to be just the type for Anne Shirley and James Craig's new-born baby in William Dieterle's picture, was prepared to begin her career on her 16th day of life, the law forbidding movie activities by any child under that age.

Marlene Dietrich, about to play a B-girl in "Man Power" and intent on her art, visited a downtown haunt of the species in search of wardrobe and other ideas for the role. Her report: "B-girls dress like anybody else."

Dress designer Milo Anderson, whose job it was to dress Miss Dietrich as a B-girl but not like anybody else, was temporarily stumped. As an American girl, Miss Dietrich's customary attire for shady roles—i.e., long-strapped handbags, suitable for swinging, beaucoup feathers, cheap finery—was out. His solution, visible on the sets: the other B-girls dress "like anybody else"; the main B-girl dresses like Miss Dietrich playing a B-girl, which is tight, eye-filling dressing.

QUIZ TWO MEN

Galion Police Question Them About Burglary Tools.

GALION—Two men held in city prison here today are being questioned by Police Chief George Moody concerning their activities prior to their arrest early yesterday near the Ohio Overcoat company.

While Lauer was handcuffing one of the men to the car the other escaped on foot. He fired several shots from his service revolver before the man halted.

Police said the truck was a stolen vehicle. A satchel found under the machine, the officers said, contained several guns and a quantity of ammunition besides a kit of burglar's tools.

You'll Dig Deeper To Pay For Those Juicy Tomatoes

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Those sliced tomatoes on your dinner table are going to cost more this summer.

Elmer K. Kruse, Ohio agricultural adjustment administration director, estimates that growing demands at home and abroad will hike wholesale prices $2.75 to $3 a ton.

He urged Ohio farmers to get in on the profits by increasing their crop of tomatoes for canning by 50 per cent.

"Ohioans will have the best opportunity in years to make money growing tomatoes," he said in predicting that the federal surplus commodities corporation would authorize canners to submit higher offers as an inducement to farmers to increase already contracted plantings.

Kruse urged a program of increased farm production which would add more than $1,250,000 to the 1941 income of Ohio farmers as part of the nationwide movement to provide food for Britain.

"It could just as easily have been a burglar," says Mrs. Christian Herrick.

"I woke up Sunday morning about 5 o'clock and there was somebody standing by my bed demanding: 'What's the matter, here?'

"It was Chris. He'd tried to wake us up, and then had climbed through a window.

"And I didn't expect him home from that A. B. C. bowling tournament at St. Paul until Sunday night."

That's only half of the story. The best half is the big and satisfied grin Chris puts on as Mrs. Chris tells the story.

But a picture I'd like to have is that of Liederkranz Kegler Chris, home from the A. B. C. wars, climbing through a window at that hour of the morning. Now if I can get a photographer out at that hour—

Chris would have had us all in stitches
If that window had banged upon his britches.

"I'm too old to be that good any more," says Bill Donnellan regarding the 692 he rolled in doubles at St. Paul.

"I'm 49 and a bit on the paunchy side, and I haven't got the ball I used to have when I was in there tangling with Skang Mercurio, Billy Hess, and the rest of that gang. So I didn't expect to collect any wood at all.

"So I was loose as a goose and twice as happy when that pocket opened up and the wood began to fall.

"The gent who was really bowling was my partner, Harold Selby. When those splits are popping up like they were for Selby, you've got to bowl to get 469.

"He gets five splits to start out with. And turns in the 6-7-10 only to look at four more big ones in a row.

"Then he begins to get careful, and pressing, and he's really sweating blood shoving that cocoanut down the alley.

"The hot way I'm going, he thinks he's letting me down, and he's trying twice as hard as he would any other time. And I'm never so sorry for a bowler in my life as I am right then for Harold Selby.

* * *

"So I finally told him: 'Whattahell, this is all in fun. Get up there and slam that apple down the alley, and don't you ever care where it goes.'

"And he does just that, and, whammie!!, there's that thing hitting right in the old pocket, and I'm jumping up and down and yelling:

" 'Boy, you've got her now!'

" 'What do you mean, I've got her?' he groans as he turns away from the alley.

"And there's the eight and ten still standing!"

* * *

The Redbirds' defeat yesterday dropped Columbus into a fourth-place tie with Minneapolis which trimmed Indianapolis, 9 to 5.

* * *

St. Paul defeated Louisville, 10 to 3, scoring six runs in the seventh and four more in the ninth after Louisville had taken a 2-0 lead.

Toledo stayed abreast of the Saints in sixth place by whipping the lagging Milwaukee club, 4 to 3.

Flag Fever Mounts at Cleveland

Three Straight Wins Scored Over Champs.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians' pennant stock rose to its annual spring peak today as the red hot redskins aimed their tomahawks at the humble Philadelphia Athletics.

* * *

Three consecutive victories over the champion Tigers put the tribe in first place and the fans in a title mood. Al Milnar completed the Detroit rout yesterday by beating the Bengals 7 to 2 on six-hit pitching.

* * *

Southpaw Al Smith who has given up only two runs in two games, drew the task of getting Cleveland off on the right foot against the eastern invaders. Connie Mack named Buck Ross.

Manager Roger Peckinpaugh said Jeff Heath would play left field until Gerry Walker, who strained his back in the final Detroit game, is able to return. Beau Bell will remain in right field.

Peckinpaugh also announced his tentative pitching lineup for the rest of the week. Jim Bagby will hurl tomorrow with Bob Feller closing the Philadelphia series Thursday. Mel Harder and Milnar are expected to pitch the Boston games Friday and Saturday.

Little Roy Weatherly, fleet Cleveland center fielder, was the big gunner in the Cleveland attack. He got two hits and drove in three runs, his sixth inning single cleaning the bases. The usual sight of three runners scoring on a one-base hits resulted from a three-two count on Roy. With two men out, all the runners got started on the pitch.

Two walks, a wild pitch, an error and Ray Mack's single routed Harold Newhouser in the seventh inning and gave the Indians three more runs. They had opened run-making production in the fourth on Bell's triple and an infield out.

* * *

Successive doubles by Pinky Higgins and Tuck Stainback gave Detroit its first run in the fifth and two innings later Hank Greenberg doubled and scored on two infield outs.

Rumors Fly On Colt's Injury

Blue Pair Reported Out Of Kentucky Derby.

By SID FEDER

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — (AP)—Topping off the list of circumstances that makes the 'different Derby," a report went the rounds today that the Derby trial mile this afternoon may uncover an injury to keep the $40,000 Blue Pair out of Saturday's run for the roses.

Starting from apparently well founded sources, this rumor said the colt that Tob Bragg, the California and New York investment broker, bought from C. C. Van Meter for $40,000 less than two weeks ago had turned up with a splint ailment and a sore back and that his performance in the annual mile "preview" would decide his chances of getting to the post Saturday.

Trainer Willie Crump refused to discuss the whole thing, but it was noted that the atmosphere around Blue Pair's stable was not of the holiday variety that usually stamps an optimistic Derby barn.

At any rate this possibility and the showing—if any—of a colt named Sporting, purchased recently by Dan Withers of Chicago, are the only factors which save today's trial stake from being just a $2,500 workout

So far as Warren Wright's Whirlaway and the four others in the field of seven are concerned the whole thing might just as well be a barn dance. Because Whirlaway, to be ridden by Eddie Arcaro Saturday, will go to the post Saturday, win, lose or scratch today, and the other quartet—Cadmium, Shaun G. Quintilhan and Burman—won't get in the Derby even through the back door, according to their handlers

Sporting bought by Withers from V. V Long, arrived at the Downs a day or so ago and no one around knows much about him. He ran as a $2,500 selling plater at Oaklawn as recent as March 1, and just why Withers thinks he has a chance in the "big leat" is one of the little mysteries that make this 67th Derby as bizarre as it now shapes up.

Their Loss Proves Big Blow To Majors

Uncle Sam's army soon will gain several top-flight major league baseball players, judging by their placements in Class 1-A. Hank Greenberg, Tiger star, is the biggest name ready to go. Hank, however, will continue to draw his reported $50,000 salary from the Tigers, according to word from Owner Walter Briggs. The Washington president, Clark Griffith, is up in arms for he stands to lose his two stars, Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis, the highest paid men on the team. Their salaries, however, will be discontinued when they enter the army. John Rigney, White Sox pitching star, is Class 1-A, too. Hugh Mulcahy, the Phillies' ace, already is in the army.

Speedy Kayo Hurts Boxing

That's Opinion of Jim Coffroth, Ex-Promoter.

SAN DIEGO, Cal — (INS) — "There's such a thing as a fighter knocking out his opponents too quickly to be a drawing card." That's what former race track and fight Promoter James W. Coffront said at his home here today.

The "Sunny Jim" of some of the greatest sports promotions of other years was talking about recent Joe Louis bouts and the willingness of cash customers to turn out even for obscure challengers.

"Fans want fights to last long enough to give them a run for their money," he continued. "Louis doesn't finish his men quickly. The fellow who buys a ticket can figure on several rounds at least. Remember Stanley Ketchell? He didn't draw because he belted them to sleep before the customer could find a seat."

Besides his ring promotions, Coffroth originated the $100,000 horse race. After the turn of the century he staged some of the epochal fights of all times, with Heavyweight Champion Jim Jeffries often in the role of principal. San Francisco, the scene of his promotions at the time, was the mecca of the boxing world.

"In 1900, the Horton law killed boxing in New York state," he continued. "The odor from the Terry McGovern-Joe Gans bout in Chicago prompted the Illinois legislature to ban fighting there. Philadelphia had only six-round, no-decision matches So boxers and managers came to San Francisco."

HANK LEIBER

Last holdout in the major leagues, Henry (Hank) Leiber, Cub outfielder, is pictured as he sauntered into the Cub offices in Chicago, where he signed his contract. Leiber, who missed all the spring practice, has been working out in his home town, Phoenix, Ariz.

New York boxing commission is listing fighters who are consistent losers and will revoke their licenses. Yep, a heap of small fry managers are mighty indignant and are getting ready to go on relief. . . . John Punches For Mitt Bill

State Boxing Measure Passed By Senate.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Senator John Kilbane of Cleveland, former world's featherweight boxing champion, began some fast punching today to get his fight bill through the house of representatives before the legislature quits work May 8.

The measure, setting up a three-member state athletic commission with sole jurisdiction over boxing and wrestling, was passed by the senate last night, 28 to 2.

* * *

The dissenting votes were cast by Senators Joseph Jameson (R-Lorain) and Horace S. Keifer (R-Springfield).

Kilbane, white-haired but still a lively stepper, asserted he would seek permission to speak for his bill on the house floor, a rather unusual privilege.

He told the senate last night that the measure would clean up a "very bad condition" in which "greedy hounds with diamond rings" sought to control the boxing game.

The proposed commission would be empowered to license all boxing and wrestling matches, the fighters, managers, promoters and handlers; a tax of 6 per cent would be levied on receipts, and anyone who operated without a license or staged a fake match would become liable to a fine of $1,000 to $10,000.

* * *

The bill also would remove all doubt as to the legality of prize-fighting.

ABC SETTLES AFTER WEEK-END SPLURGE

ST. PAUL —(INS)— After a heavy dose of excitement over the week-end including a 745 singles series by Fred Ruff of Belleville, Ill., for a new high in individual event, a lull settled temporarily over the American Bowling Congress today.

Leaders remained unchanged yesterday, when the best score was turned in by the Stegemaier Five of Wilkes Barre, Pa., A 2,940 count which was not quite enough to hit the big money. Second high for the day was 2,922, bowled in the five-man division by the De Luxe Dye works squad of Detroit.

Outfielders Arrive Early

Two Braves Gardeners Report For Drills.

Infielders and gardeners of the Mansfield Braves aren't due to report to Manager Alex Clowson until Thursday, but when the early-bird squad of batterymen arrived at the Fairground ball yard yesterday to go through their daily paces, there were two pasture patrolmen waiting for them.

* * *

Bill McGrath and Elmer Sielski, Cleveland youngster, just couldn't wait for that Thursday call, so now they are working out with the rest of the gang and expect to have plenty of early foot to show their competitors for outfield berths.

* * *

Since the outfield is the one thing that's really worrying Chief Alex—last year's fly-chasing trio was completely broken up—he was happy enough to see the ambitious pair.

McGrath is a right-hander all the way, and Sielski a port-sider.

Dean Dawson, who hurled last summer for Shiloh and Ontario, also was a newcomer in the Braves' tepee.

* * *

All of the boys who have now had nearly a week's training under Clowson's watchful eye were reported in good condition today and ready to show the rest of the Tribe some free-wheeling mound stuff when they arrive.

All were in good shape, that is, with the exception of Harold Robison, Erie, Pa., flinger, who was forced out of action yesterday by a sore throat.

Business Manager Oscar Ruhl has been trying to book exhibition games with Wooster, Ashland and Kenyon colleges to give the Braves a taste of competition before their opener here May 14 with Lima.

On Saturday, May 10, the Bellville Independents are scheduled to tangle with the Braves at the Fairground, and on Sunday, May 11, Ontario is booked for an exhibition tilt.

Brooklyn Trips Reds In Opener

Writer Says Foes Show Improvement For '41.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

The Cincinnati Reds last year were world champions, and they may be again, but it must be said at this early date that other teams have improved while the Reds have remained stationary.

* * *

The champs came east yesterday and bumped into the Brooklyn Dodgers, one of the National league's improved clubs. Their clash was a battle of titans, but the Dodgers emerged with their seventh successful victory, 3-2, and took over first place in the senior circuit, while the Reds were left languishing in fourth place.

The Reds had good pitching—a six-hit job by their veteran ace, Paul Derringer. They had their customary flawless fielding—including one of the most spectacular catches of the young season when Ival (Poison Ivy) Goodman stood almost against the rightfield fence, 300 feet from the plate, and jumped high to spear a liner in the sixth inning. They had as good an offense as the Dodgers—six hits, including a home run by Buck McCormick.

Whitlow Wyatt, near 31 years of age and getting bald, struck out ten of the champs and held them to six hits, too. When McCormick's homer put the Reds in front, the Dodgers had what it took to get back in front—a single by Jim Wasdell and a home run by Alex Kampouris, who led the International league in circuit-swatting last year. When the Reds tied the score through Ernesto Natali Lombardi's triple in the seventh, the Dodgers had what was needed to win in the ninth—a single with two on by old Whit Wyatt himself.

The Reds haven't skidded, but to finish 12 games in front of the Dodgers last year they had to win 41 games by one run and Brooklyn had to fall into a lot of trouble like Joe Medwick's beaning, Harry Lavagetto's appendicitis operation, Wyatt's sore arm and Peewee Reese's broken heel bone.

You can bet that the fighting is going to be a lot fiercer this year. The St. Louis Cardinals are in the middle of it, also.

The American league action has switched to the west. While the eastern teams were traveling yesterday, the Cleveland Indians reinforced their grip on first place by drubbing the Detroit Tigers, 7-2. The Chicago White Sox moved into a third-place tie with a 2-1 edge over the St. Louis Browns.
